Holiday Toll On D. C. Area Roads Rises To 13 Dead

Three More Killed And Six Injured In Labor Day Weekend Crashes

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Traffic accidents claimed the lives of three persons yesterday in the Washington area. Six others were injured.

The day's toll brought the area's total for the holiday weekend so far to 13 killed and at least 26 injured.

William LeRoy Clock, 26, of 918 M st. nw., was dead on arrival early yesterday at St. Marys Hospital, Leonardtown, Md. He was injured shortly before midnight when his car left Route 242, about a half mile west of Abell, Md., in St. Marys County. Death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Benny Spencer, about 45, of Upper Marlboro, Md., was fatally injured early yesterday when he was struck by a car near Upper Marlboro. The accident, police said, occurred on Route 4.

A technical charge of manslaughter was brought against Wilbur C. Tolson of Upper Marlboro, reported by police to be driver of the car which hit Spencer. Tolson, released under bond, will appear in the Upper Marlboro Police Court Friday.

New York Woman Dies

Mrs. Mamie Tyler, 48, of New York, died at 6:57 a. m. yesterday in the Alexandria Hospital. She suffered multiple cuts and bruises early Saturday when the car in which she was a passenger went out of control on U. S. 1, three miles south of Woodbridge, Va., and ran off the road.

The same accident claimed the lives of two brothers and injured three other passengers.

Charles McNabb, 28, of 5912 Nevada st. nw., was seriously injured in a two-car collision on Route 313, a mile south of Greensboro, Md. He was in serious con-

206 of Holiday's 264 Deaths on Highways

By The Associated Press

The Labor Day weekend accident death toll reached 264 Sunday night, with 156 persons dead in mishaps involving automobiles.

Twenty-seven drownings were reported as millions enjoyed summer's last holiday fling. Another 31 deaths in miscellaneous types of accidents included the nine killed in Saturday's train wreck near Milwaukee, and victims of plane crashes in Pennsylvania, Utah and Wisconsin.

The National Safety Council predicted before the holiday began that 435 persons would be killed in automobile accidents alone from Friday, 6 p. m., local time, to midnight Monday.

Lifeguards Save Seven Nuns From Drowning in Ocean

STONE HARBOR, N. J., Sept 3 (U.P.).—Lifeguards saved seven nuns from drowning in a strong undertow at an unprotected beach, officials disclosed today.

The nuns were swept out as far as a half-mile. All seven could swim, however, and managed to keep afloat until guards from nearby stations reached them with buoys and a boat.

One nun collapsed and was treated by a physician.

The nuns, all from Our Lady Star of the Sea Church, Atlantic City, were visiting the Villa Maria convent near the beach here when the incident occurred late yesterday. Their names were not disclosed.

PLANE CRASHED WHERE GARY JOHNSON, 8, WAS PLAYING MINUTES EARLIER

Plane Crash At Groveton Injures Two

Real Estate Operator Pilot of Craft Which Barely Misses House

Two occupants of a light private plane were injured critically yesterday afternoon when they crash-landed in the garden of a Groveton (Va.) home—400 feet from the runways of the Beacon Field Airport, south of Alexandria.

Alexandria Hospital identified the victims as Daniel E. Ragalie, 45, of 2502 S. Joyce st., Arlington, a prominent real estate operator, and Mrs. Margaret Cooksey Mowrer, 34, of 50 Old Glebe rd., Arlington.

Hospital attaches said Mrs. Mowrer suffered a compound skull fracture, and fractures of the right ankle and left foot, severe shock and multiple cuts and abrasions. Ragalie suffered a possible skull fracture, compound fractures of both legs and multiple lacerations and abrasions.

The airport said Ragalie was owner of the plane. It was not known last night whether he or Mrs. Mowrer, an aviation enthusiast, piloted the plane.

The plane, airport officials said, had just taken off from the field. Engine trouble in the three-seater Fairchild "24" is believed to have downed the plane. The time was shortly after 4 p. m.

Mrs. Dewey S. Johnson of 205 W. Franklin st., Groveton, had been picking beans in her garden about the time the plane took off. Her 8-year-old son, Gary Lee, had been feeding a pair of pet chickens in the yard.

Family 30 Feet Away

Mrs. Johnson said she thought a storm was coming up, and she and the youngster went into the house, 30 or 35 feet from the yard.

"We were sitting in the living room," she recalled, "and I had just started to read to him."

"I heard the terrible crash. I thought the whole house was coming down. I was petrified."

A neighbor, O. C. Halsey, of 1977 S. Richmond hwy., Groveton, rushed to the Johnson backyard.

Mrs. Johnson credits him with dragging the man and woman from the plane. The front end of the ship had, by this time, caught fire. The Penn-Daw Fire Department extinguished the flames and the Penn-Daw Rescue Squad took the victims to the hospital.

Had Turned Around

From neighbors' descriptions of the plane's course, it apparently had turned around and was heading back to the airport

The pilot apparently made an effort to avoid hitting the Johnson house.

Fourteen-year-old Carmelita Herring of 200 W. Franklin st., told how she was sitting on the porch of her house.

"It was coming down when I saw it. I yelled, 'Oh, it's going to crash! It's going to crash.'

"It was sort of gliding in. I saw it sort of turn away from the house."

Mrs. Johnson said the plane tore up her garden, knocked down trees and smashed into a small chicken coop.

Lands on Rocks

GI Slips, Falls 20 Feet From Bridge

A 21-year-old soldier from the Army War College at Fort McNair yesterday escaped serious injury when he fell from a steel ladder on Chain Bridge onto rocks of the Potomac River.

He is Corpl. J. Albert Thomas, who was under treatment last night in Georgetown University Hospital for a back injury.

Police said Thomas and Pfc. R. D. Zins, 22, rented a canoe yesterday afternoon at Fletcher's Boathouse.

The soldiers tied up under Chain Bridge, and Corporal Thomas started to climb a 25-foot ladder to the bridge. Pfc. Zins said his friend planned to cross the bridge and buy soft drinks and sandwiches from a refreshment stand.

Thomas had climbed about 20 feet when he lost his balance, and fell backward onto the rocks.

Zins told police he was not able to reach his friend. But an unidentified man, who had been sitting on the rocks, picked Thomas up and carried him back to the canoe.

Zins said he started back for the boathouse. Meanwhile, the man who had helped rescue Thomas called police.

Two Seventh Precinct men hurried to Fletcher's boathouse, secured a canoe, and started up river. They met the canoe with the two soldiers about a quarter of a mile from the bridge, took the injured man back to the boathouse and then to Georgetown Hospital by scout car.

The injuries suffered by Corpl. Thomas turned out to be less serious than at first thought. Several hours after being admitted to Georgetown University Hospital for treatment, he was released and returned to his station at Fort McNair.

Husband Tells Of Slaying in Parked Auto

Wife Refused Loan, Says W. J. Anderson; Arraignment Today

(Picture on Page 3)

By Jean Reiff and John London
Post Reporters

William J. Anderson, 59, former Supreme Court Building engineer, will be arraigned in Municipal Court today on a charge of murdering his estranged wife.

Arrested early Sunday, Anderson admitted within an hour of questioning that he shot his wife in the head after an argument in her parked car.

The wife, Mrs. Laura Mae Anderson, 47, of 336 18th st. ne., a Federal Communications Commission secretary, was found fatally shot in her car parked at 11th and C sts. ne., shortly before noon. The body was slumped over the steering wheel, a bullet had smashed through the back of her head. Her blue dress was drenched with blood.

Readily Admitted Crime

Twelve hours later, just after midnight, Police Pvts. Charles C. Mahoney and H. A. MacNeil arrested the husband on description in a southeast park. He readily admitted his identity. Then he told detectives he and his wife, married 25 years ago, had been separated since 1948. He indicated he thought she had been interested in someone else.

Saturday morning, Anderson said, she telephoned and asked him to meet her at 11th and C sts. ne. to talk about property they owned jointly. They met, talked about the property. Anderson, who left his job two months ago, said he asked his wife to lend him some money. She refused. He shot her through the back of her head, then took $3 from her purse, he told police.

Anderson said he dropped the revolver, a .38-caliber Colt, on the front seat, near the body. He left the car, dropped into a few taverns for drinks, then rested in the southeast park, where he was arrested.

Address in Dispute

Anderson gave the 18th st. address as his home. However, police said he has been living in a rooming house on 11th st. ne., near the murder scene.

He was visited yesterday at police headquarters by his son, William J. Anderson, jr., 23, a salesman for a paper company, of Decatur Heights, Md.

Police reported Anderson signed

Girl, 4, Fights For Life After 10-Floor Plunge

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (NYHT).—Four-year-old Karen Weiler fought for her life at Bellevue Hospital today, 24 hours after her escape from death in a fall of nearly 100 feet from her apartment home in Stuyvesant Town.

Hospital attendants said her condition was critical, but that she was "somewhat brighter," and had even expressed a desire to go home. She fell at 5 p. m. Saturday from the ninth-floor apartment of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Weiler. Karen had been left for a few minutes by her mother, and was at play with another child in the nursery when the accident occurred.

She actually fell 10 floors, since numbering of the Stuyvesant Town buildings begins one level above the main or ground floor. She struck on soft- freshly-turned earth beside the building.

D. C. Air Force Veteran Dies Of Freak Accident Injuries

Robert E. Grimes, 37-year-old Air Force veteran of 715 15th st. se., died yesterday of injuries suffered last week in a freak automobile accident.

Grimes, a mechanic for the Pullman Co., took his 1941 Oldsmobile to the Hawkins Blue Sunoco Service Station, 5410 Georgia ave. nw., to have the brakes tested on August 28.

He stood against a wall, facing the car, as an attendant, Sylvester Ostrich, 30, of 518 Jefferson st. nw. started the car forward, then applied the brakes.

Either the brakes failed or the car skidded on grease. Grimes was pinned against the wall. He died at 5:20 a. m. in Emergency Hospital from an embolism which resulted from a fracture of the left leg.

He is survived by his wife, Twila Grimes; two brothers, Thomas E. Grimes of Forrestville, Md., and Charles H. Grimes of Alexandria, and two sisters, Mrs. Edith Wyatt of Seat Pleasant, Md., and Mrs. Mildred Youmans, of the 15th st. address.

'Persecution' Is Charged

Johnson Accused by Tauriello Of 'Forcing' Forrestal to Quit

Representative Anthony F. Tauriello (D., N. Y.), yesterday charged that Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson, through criticism and gossip, "forced" the late Secretary of Defense James Forrestal to resign.

This charge was coupled with a new demand for Johnson to quit his post.

Tauriello hoped, he wrote Johnson, that "you would have the humility and patriotism to strengthen your country by resigning. The people . . . have lost faith in your management of national defense."

The freshman Buffalo Congressman's earlier demand for Johnson's resignation was rejected by Johnson on August 30 in a 3500-word letter.

Tauriello's renewed demand was the theme of a letter replying to Johnson's, in which the Cabinet officer had compared himself to Forrestal who "also suffered from the spreading of misinformation."

"I am informed by reliable officials and newspaper correspondents," wrote Tauriello, "that you contributed in no small way to the persecution of Mr. Forrestal. I understand you gathered and relayed gossip and information critical of Mr. Forrestal, and, in effect, forced his resignation."

Johnson succeeded Forrestal in March, 1949, after Forrestal, exhausted and ill, had resigned. Two months later, Forrestal took his own life by leaping from the tower of Bethesda Naval Hospital where he was under treatment for a nervous condition.

Tauriello charged that Johnson's "intrigue against the State Department" had created "confusion both at home and abroad." He demanded that Johnson "cease lecturing Congressmen" and take steps to improve relations with the State Department and other agencies with which the Defense Department must deal.

Tauriello wrote that he understood Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had been prevented from resigning "only out of a deep sense of patriotism." It was "common knowl-

135 Killed By Typhoon In Japan

1039 Hurt, 230,000 Homeless; Fishing Fleet Damaged; 243 Bridges Wrecked

OSAKA, Japan (Monday), Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Japan's worst typhoon in 16 years roared along the coast of Hokkaido today, leaving at least 135 persons dead, 1039 injured and some 230,000 homeless.

National police headquarters said casualty figures would mount even higher when communications, disrupted by the deadly twister, have been restored. More than 100 persons were missing.

The typhoon, named "Jane," ripped through this densely populated industrial section of Japan's largest island of Honshu yesterday, leaving chaos and misery in its wake. Today it whipped across the northern part of the island, leaped the Tsugaru Strait and lashed at the west coast of Hokkaido, northernmost island of Japan.

7645 Homes Destroyed

Latest figures showed that 7645 homes had been destroyed, 14,218 partially destroyed, 27,959 flooded above the floor level, and 87,352 flooded to lesser extent.

Police said that more than 17,000 farms were hit, including 9000 acres of food-producing rice paddies.

The twister raised havoc with ships vital to Japan's highly important fishing industry. Nine ships were sunk during the height of the storm, while 437 others were washed off shore. At least 84 were destroyed.

Inland, transportation was crippled as the giant winds disrupted 120 roads and washed away 213 bridges.

Three Cities Hard-Hit

The typhoon is expected to enter Okhotsk Sea sometime this afternoon. The brunt of the damaging storm hit neighboring industrial centers where shrieking winds were recorded at 110 miles an hour. The cities of Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto on Honshu Island were hard-hit and crippled by the raging winds. Tokyo, on the fringes of the center, was merely fanned by strong winds during the night and no serious damage was reported there.

Storm Heads North Along Florida Coast

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 4 (AP).—A small hurricane skirted the lower west edge of Florida into the Gulf of Mexico early tonight, and headed north along the coast.

Although squalls up to 85 miles an hour were reported by a Navy hurricane hunter plane which flew into the storm, the strongest sustained winds were 65 to 70 miles an hour, the Weather Bureau reported.

Gales flowing from the hurricane whipped much of the Florida peninsula, but up to nightfall only minor damage had been reported. The highest winds reported on the mainland were gusts up to 65 miles an hour at Miami.

A Weather Bureau bulletin at 6 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) said the storm's forward movement had slowed to 12 miles on hour.

A steamship, the Gulfshore, in the Florida straits east of Key West, reported it was struck by winds of full hurricane force—75 miles an hour—as the storm moved by.

The "baby" storm was described by Grady Norton, chief forecaster at the Miami Weather Bureau, as a "stop and go, ebb and flow" type of disturbance.

Marines' Losses In Korea 177, But Only 3 Dead

The Marine Corps has suffered a total of 177 identified casualties in Korea, the Defense Department reported yesterday.

The information was included in the department's eighty-fourth casualty list. It added 250 more names to the toll of American casualties in the Korean war. Seventeen were listed as killed in action, two dead of wounds, 210 wounded, 3 injured and 18 missing in action.

The Marine Corps reported two killed in action, one dead of wounds, 173 wounded and one missing in action. The Navy listed one wounded. The rest were Army personnel.

Identified casualties are those whose next of kin have been notified. There may be others whose names were not included because their families have not yet been notified.

U. S. Airmen Slash Red Foe In Record Day

Fliers' 600 Sorties, Excluding Navy Strikes, Rock 120-Mile Front

TOKYO (Monday), Sept. 4 (U.P.). American warplanes, slashing at Communist offensives on four fronts, yesterday smashed all records with more than 600 sorties, an Air Force spokesman said today.

The record number of flights did not include those made by the Navy's planes, the spokesman said.

American B-26s and F-51s were out all night, striking communications from Seoul to the southern coast, the spokesman said, and at dawn F-80s and F-51s flying from Japanese bases, resumed their attacks on enemy troops.

Many of the F-21s returned to Japan last night after flying throughout the day from forward bases in Korea. They were refueled, rearmed, and prepared for the maximum number of strikes from short distances again today.

Hundreds of planes were out yesterday, too, as the Air Force threw what Gen. Douglas MacArthur called "a Sunday punch" against the North Koreans.

Fighting the edge of a typhoon that caused widespread destruction in Japan, planes of every type from B-29 Superfortresses to F-51 Mustang fighters were in the air attacking the Reds with rockets, bombs, machine-gun bullets and deadly Napalm gasoline-jelly fire bombs.

Seven enemy tanks were destroyed by mid-afternoon. Many artillery pieces were knocked out. Road transport and supply depots were hit and enemy troops punished with every weapon the planes had.

American Fifth Air Force, Australian Royal Air Force, American Far East Bomber Command, American Navy and Marine Corps planes took part in the assault that spread all around the 120-mile United Nations defense perimeter.

Most of the planes engaged in direct close support of the American and South Korean infantry.

GE Employes in Some Cities Defy CIO Call for Strike

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP).—General Electric Co. employes in some cities today defied a CIO call for a Tuesday strike.

At Bridgeport, Conn., and Pittsfield, Mass., thousands of CIO workers voted to stay on the job Tuesday.

At Fort Wayne, Ind., thousands of others put off any strike action until they could vote next week on whether to walk out or not.

The company claimed information that workers at a Philadelphia plant also would not strike.

The CIO International Union of Electrical Workers has called out its remaining 35,000 members in 45 General Electric plants across the country. About 23,000 already are idle in Syracuse, N. Y., and Lynn and Everett, Mass.

The CIO is demanding a boost wages. They also want a completely company-paid pension. The whole package totals about 15 cents an hour.

The Fort Wayne local, covering an estimated 10,000 employes, decided to conduct its own strike vote Tuesday through Saturday.

Enemy Pushes Within 10 Miles Of Vital Taegu, Then Is Stopped

BULLETIN

United States Eighth Army Headquarters, Monday, Sept. 4 (AP).—An Eighth Army spokesman said today the Korean Reds had captured the town of Angang, cutting the highway from the east coast port of Pohang to Taegu.

Angang is about 10 miles southwest of Pohang, No. 2 United Nations supply port, and some 6 miles south of Kigye. The spokesman said the Communists were driving southward from Angang.

TOKYO (Monday), Sept. 4 (AP). — North Korean Reds launched heavy new assaults today at both ends of the flaming United Nations defense line.

A United States Eighth Army communique said the Communists hit the southern end of the line, defended by the United States Twenty-fifth Infantry Division, at 7 a. m. Monday (4 p. m. EST Sunday).

The attack apparently was futile. The communique said reserve units of the division restored positions and relieved isolated elements.

On the northeastern end of the line, the Reds brought heavy pressure to bear on the South Korean Division north of Pohang. The Eighth Army Communique did not pinpoint the action there.

It said two Red divisions "exerted heavy pressure" toward the east-coast port city of Pohang and toward the road that runs from Pohang west to Yongchon.

South Korean troops in the area withdrew up to 3½ miles Sunday, the Eighth Army summary said.

The Reds' new general offensive reached to a point 10 miles north of the vital Allied communications center at Taegue Sunday. A United States First Cavalry Division counterattack halted the drive at the city in the northwest corner of the U. N. beachhead.

The Reds renewed their activity in this area Monday morning and put a battalion in a walled city 12 miles northeast of Waegwan, but United States troops held their line.

[The United Press reported that the Reds seized Angang-Ni, 8 miles southwest of Pohang, and Kasan, 10 miles north of Taegu. Angang-Ni lies across the supply roads to Pohang from Taegu and Pusan. Kasan is on high ground from which artillery fire could command the highway from the south into Taegu.]

On the beachhead's west wall, United States Second Division infantrymen and Marines renewed a counterattack they began Sunday against Reds in the Yongsan-Changnyong bulge on the east bank of the Naktong River.

The Eighth Army summary said the Second Division troops added fresh gains of 1000 to 1500 yards to the advances of three miles west and six miles south of Yongsan Sunday.

At least 90,000 Reds, in nine identified divisions, were hunting soft spots in the Allied defense line with their new offensive all along the 120-mile front.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said they hadn't found any.

5 Captured GIs Slain By Red Woman Guerilla

MASAN FRONT in Korea, Monday, Sept. 4 (AP).—A Communist woman guerilla shot down seven American prisoners in cold blood last night. Five were killed and two wounded were left for dead.

The story was told by a Michigan soldier, whose name was withheld. In a bedside interview, he said he was left among the corpses.

"We were a Signal Corps detachment running a relay radio station," he said.

"We were all asleep. There were ten Reds and three of them were girls. "I could not see which one did it."

However, the other survivor whispered that they were shot by one of the women.

Green, Murray Hit Red Aims, T-H Law

By The Associated Press

Leaders of labor yesterday dedicated the midcentury Labor Day to two common aims: (1) To beat off Communist aggression anywhere and (2) to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act at home.

Key messages were issued by AFL President William Green, leader of 8,000,000 union members, and CIO President Philip Murray.

Murray's organization has just finished an anti-Red purge which cost it 11 unions and about a sixth of the CIO's 6,000,000 members. The operation was planned by Murray and his associates last Labor Day.

In his message yesterday Murray said:

"The American people, who had hoped to live at peace with themselves and with the world, are confronted by a new threat of world war. The threat comes from the masters of Communist world strategy. . . .

"The workers of America want a peaceful world, in which men and women may work to improve their living standards, their democratic institutions, their personal good and welfare. These are precious goals, and we will strive for their achievement."

Labor to Keep Gains

Murray added: "Let no man think he can take advantage of our national crisis to weaken our unions or to rob our people of hard-won gains."

At the half-way mark in the twentieth century, both Murray and Green urged active political roles for their union adherents, and declared it to be their prime political aim to elect a Congress which would wipe out the Taft-Hartley Act.

Said Green:

"I am convinced that prompt repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act should stand as the number one item on our national defense program. It would revitalize the workers of this country, inspire them as no other action could, to pitch in and do the tremendous job that lies ahead of them."

Green said the Taft-Hartley law is a powerful propaganda tool in "the hands of the Communists."

"They point to it, in their propaganda messages to workers in other lands, as proof of American insincerity in professing to accord equality of treatment to all citizens."

Green Recalls Warnings

Green recalled AFL warnings of Red aggression and went on:

"Now the full scope of Communist treachery and the full danger of the Communist threat against world peace is at last becoming apparent to all Americans and to all freedom-loving and peace-loving peoples everywhere.

"Therefore, despite the tragic nature of the Korean invasion, we can, at least, be thankful for the warning it has given us of what lies in store and the opportunity it affords to make ready for whatever further move Soviet Russia or her satellites may make."

Similar expressions were heard from such other labor leaders as Al J. Hayes, president of the International Association of Machinists, and from Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin. Tobin, however, made no mention of Taft-Hartley.

The show of political and international unity of purpose appeared against a background of trouble on the home labor front.

General Electric Corp. plants face shutdown Wednesday as the CIO-International Union of Electrical Workers threatens a walkout for higher pay and pensions. While the IUE has only 60,000 members, they are counting on picket lines to idle another 100,000 non-union workers and members of the rival United Electrical Workers which the CIO expelled in its anti-Red drive.

The railroads still are in the hands of the Government. They were seized a week ago to avert a strike by 300,000 trainmen and conductors over demands for 48 hours' pay for 40 hours work.

U. S. Reports 1949 Human Rights Gains

LAKE SUCCESS, Sept. 3 (AP).—The United States chalked up its score tonight in gains made in the field of human rights during 1949.

Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate, submitted to the United Nations a nine-page record of official action, ranging from congress to town councils, on progress in labor laws, eliminating discrimination, improving school attendance, and improving housing.

The report goes into a U. N. yearbook on human rights.

Austin pointed out that all the gains recorded "can be understood only when viewed against the total background of assurances of human rights in the United States, including the Federal Constitution, its Bill of Rights" and other amendments and legislation.

The report cited a Supreme Court decision on illegal search and seizure which prohibits Federal courts from using evidence obtained by State officers not bound by a search and seizure restriction.

In the field of discrimination, the report showed that in 1949 the Federal Government and the Army, as well as States and school systems, took steps to cut down racial and color barriers.

Topographic Maps Missing, Chapman Says

Secretary of the Interior Chapman said yesterday that topographic maps for three-fourths of the United States are "either substandard or missing entirely."

Chapman said in a statement that this inadequacy of mapping in many parts of the country will handicap the defense effort.

"The geological survey recently was unable to supply many of the maps needed by an important civilian activity, connected with national defense," Chapman said.

"The activity was seeking to inspect a large area of the country for potential plant sites."

Chapman gave no indication as to the agency affected.

Similarly, he said, an engineering concern seeking a route for new natural gas transmission lines found it necessary to prepare various types of map substitutes for areas where no satisfactory maps were available.

Chapman commented in connec- with publication by the Geological Survey of two maps showing the status of Federal topographic mapping.

They showed that only about 10 percent of the Nation is mapped to fully adequate standards. Another 15 percent is covered by maps which, although deficient in some respects, are still usable for most needs.

Hyattsville Marine Listed as Missing In Korean Action

A 20-year-old Marine, Pfc. Bernard Ulrich Stavely of Hyattsville, Md., has been listed by the Department of Defense as missing in action in Korea.

The boy, youngest of the Stavely brothers, is the only one currently in uniform, although his four older brothers served in the armed services during World War II.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Stavely, live at 6112 42d pl., Hyattsville.

A native of Springfield, Pa., young Stavely was educated in Hyattsville public schools and graduated from the Hyattsville High School in 1948. He enlisted in the Marine Corps a month later, and was sent overseas last June.

The Stavely brothers who served in World War II are John F. of 4709 Rittenhouse st., Riverdale; Louis G., of 4103 53d pl., Bladensburg; Robert A., of 120 Irvington st. nw., and Harry W. Jr., of Littlestown, Pa.

Tobin Says Labor Adequate To Meet Any Defense Demands

Secretary of Labor Tobin said yesterday the Nation has untapped sources of manpower and the ingenuity to meet any labor demands for defense.

Tobin, in an interview on the Columbia Broadcasting System, said there are many factors which would offset the comparatively small number of unemployed.

Last week, the Census Bureau reported a record of 62 million persons in the work force, and fewer than three million unemployed.

There were eight million unemployed in 1940, Tobin said, when President Roosevelt was stepping up the defense program in World War II.

But Tobin said the work force now is not only larger but "much better trained," a great deal more capable and skillful." The Nation has more and better factories and equipment to produce military goods than in 1940.

The total labor force could be raised far above the World War II peak because the population has increased by 20 million in the past decade.

There are "many untapped sources left for us to reach." Older workers will return to jobs "impelled by patriotic motives." Several million women war workers likewise "will be glad to return if they feel their country needs them."

The average work week now is slightly over 40 hours, but "American workers will be willing to work much longer hours in order to bring about the production which is necessary to have our country adequately and properly defended."

Tobin cautioned against drafting skilled workers unless the Armed Forces are prepared to use their skills. There are 48 critical skills in short supply now, he said, and "we should make absolutely sure that people in those critical skills are used in their skills whether they be professional or whether they be craftsmen."

British Troops Unload Gear in Korea

New Attack on Secy. Johnson

edge" he declared, that Johnson's "attempts to dominate and dictate to" the Joint Chiefs had caused "friction and confusion."

He accused Johnson of making "misleading" statements in his letter declining to resign, particularly by including laudatory quotations from Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee. Tauriello then listed a number of paragraphs from the same Vinson speech quoted by Johnson, in which Vinson criticized the Secretary of Defense's economy program.

Among these was a statement that Johnson's program had not only cut away military "fat" but had cut "into sinew and muscle of the armed services."

To Johnson's charge that criticism of his activities was motivated by politics, Tauriello replied that, in his case at least, such a charge was "absurd." He pointed out that he himself was a Democrat "and must stand for reelection, while you are not subject to popular recall." He added that "a casual study of the Congressional Record" would reveal that Johnson's "most consistent boosters" were Republicans."

Defense of Johnson's policies, meanwhile, came from Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, chairman of the Defense Department's management committee. McNarney declared in an address prepared for delivery before the National Exchange Club that "notable progress" had been made in the defense program.

He said this progress had been made during the three years under unification, a period divided equally between the administrations of Forrestal and Johnson. It was impossible, he declared, to distinguish between the accomplishments of the two secretaries.

McNarney said that due to the two years spent in developing a single budget for all the Armed Forces, the Defense Department now has been able to prepare in 18 days a budget which more than doubled the defense program. Normally such a budget requires about 18 months of preparation.

Under unification, said McNarney, progress in strategic organization has produced these accomplishments:

1. "Development of a strategic concept tailored to new world conditions."

2. Clarification of the "roles and missions" of each of the Armed Forces in time of war.

3. Development and continuous review of a unified strategic defense plan which "assesses our commitments, our risks, our capabilities and those of the free nations associated with us."

McNarney also had this comment:

"It (the Defense Establishment) has never contended that any war could be won by strategic bombing alone. But lest our Monday morning quarterbacks confuse us, it has contended that the capability, in being, to deliver immediate and terrible retaliation against a major aggressor is essential. Essential not only as a potent deterrent to war but also essential to avoid defeat, while we marshal our industrial and military might, without which we could expect to lose the war."

Oklahoma Candidate Attacks Sec. Johnson

By the United Press

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday was named "the most incompetent man in Washington" by the Rev. Bill Alexander, Oklahoma Republican Senatorial candidate.

Appearing on the N. B. C. "Meet the Press" telecast, the red-haired parson said Johnson was part of the "twilight of honor" now overshadowing the Nation's Capital.

Alexander also accused President Truman of a "defeatist attitude" in dealing with the U.S.S.R. and blamed the Administration for the "Korean mess."

Questioned about his mid-campaign switch from the Democrats to the G.O.P., Alexander said it was the "will of God" brought about by a night of prayer.

Yanks Halt Reds in South, But Enemy Gains in North

30,000 troops in the line, in unidentified divisions.

Facing these hordes were four United States Army divisions, a brigade of United States Marines and five South Korean divisions.

Masan Front, in the Extreme South— The Reds renewed their attack against the United States Twenty-fifth Division. The drive they started last Thursday midnight was aimed at the Allied supply port of Pusan, on the southeast corner of the peninsula. Its immediate objective was the southern coast port of Masan.

Officers of the Twenty-fifth Division estimated that Army doughboys inflicted up to 12,000 casualties on North Koreans in the bitter battle.

Southwest, near Yongsan—Marines and U. S. Second Division counterattacked in efforts to erase Communist bulge near confluence of Naktong and Nam rivers. The Reds had advanced 8½ miles eastward for their biggest gain of the southern offensive Friday and Saturday, but the Americans recovered about half of it.

Northwest and North, Waegwan-Taegu Sector: The Reds uncorked a Sunday drive that gained 3½ miles down the "Bowling Alley" stretch of the Tabu-Taegu highway. Forward patrols reached within 10 miles of Taegu before counterattacking First Cavalry infantrymen banged into the spearhead and halted it.

East Coast, Around Pohang: South Koreans fell back several thousand yards before Red hordes jumping off from Kigye, 9 miles northwest of Pohang. The Reds threatened the junction city of Kyongju on the Taegu-Pusan highway.

The main enemy effort appeared to be north of Taegu, key city in the Allied defense.

It was the Tabu-Taegu highway that became a graveyard of Red armor in an eight-day battle that began August 15. The Communists lost 30 out of 40 tanks in a futile effort to smash down the road that United States soldiers dubbed "the bowling alley."

Yanks Still Hold Town

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported that the new attack toward Taegu of which a Red deserter had warned in advance opened Saturday evening with a 70-minute artillery barrage in which at least 2000 shells were hurled at American lines.

Then the Red machine began to move. Communist soldiers punched ahead 3½ miles. Patrols infiltrated down both sides of the highway 2 miles south of Tabu, but the town itself was still held by the First Cavalry. Americans counterattacked.

Drowning out the din of battle was an electrical rainstorm.

West of this fighting, advance elements of a Red force clambered up Hill 501—a bald, rugged mass of rock 4½ miles northeast of Waegwan. U. S. infantrymen regained most of the heights after a six-hour fight.

Reds' Supplies a Problem

Summing up the situation around Taegu, a First Cavalry spokesman said the Reds now had been halted and "the next few hours will tell whether we can hold them or whether we will have to throw more in."

Supplying this northern front is apparently taxing the Reds. War materials are reportedly brought by rail to Kunwi, about 25 air miles north of Taegu, and then lashed to the backs of hundreds of coolies for movement to the front.

Allied air power—in its all-out support of ground troops—is reportedly striking at this human chain belt but not stopping it.

Also pressed into service for movement of Red supplies are oxen and horses.

At the east end of the northern front, the United States Eighth Army communique, which normally lags behind field dispatches, indicated the Reds may have made their greatest gains.

Small enemy units slipped through to the Pohang-Yongchon road south of Kigye. General MacArthur's headquarters reported the South Koreans were counterattacking to wipe out the block across the road to Taegu.

It was on the northeastern front that the United States threw into action its powerful 47½ Patton tanks—equiped with 90-millimeter guns that throw shells three times faster than sound.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Huth reported from the western front that the Marines and Second Division foot soldiers punched steadily ahead.

The Leathernecks pushed westward while a joint Marine-Army task force drove southward six miles to points overlooking the muddy Naktong River.

The westward drive, Huth said, carried the Devil Dogs to a second series of ridges west of Yongsan. They were opposed by heavy small-arms and machine-gun fire.

Red Losses Mount Up

Hard-hitting 155-millimeter howitzers, an observer reported, plastered a Red force of 1000 troops at Songjin, southwest of Yongsan.

Maryland Leads Area In Inductions

Maryland has taken the lead over the District and Virginia in getting its draft-age men into the armed forces.

As of today, 146 Maryland draftees have been inducted into the Army. That represents approximately one fifth of the Free State's September quota of 735.

Neither the District nor Virginia has processed any of its draftees for induction.

The first group of Washington inductees, some 55 men, will be sworn in at a mass ceremony at 3 p. m. Wednesday at the E st. entrance to the District Building. The District has a quota of 252 for September. Similar mass induction for local draftees are scheduled September 13, 20 and 27.

Virginia, with a draft quota of 1087 for September, has scheduled induction at Arlington Farms for draftees in the Washington area, beginning September 5. Twenty-one men from Arlington will be given the oath on September 19; 19 from Alexandria on September 21; 21 from Fairfax on September 28.

Maryland draftees in the Washington area will be inducted at Arlington Farms this month beginning with September 7, when six men report from Hyattsville. Thereafter, the schedule is as follows:

September 12, Silver Spring, eight men; Upper Marlboro, three men; Leonardtown, one man; September 14, La Plata, Chevy Chase and Upper Marlboro, each four.

Bombs Dropped As Planes Exceed 500 Miles an Hour

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 3 (AP).—The safe and accurate dropping of heavy bombs for the first time at speeds over 500 miles an hour was disclosed today by North American Aviation, Inc., with Air Force approval.

The announcement said bombs weighing from 500 to 4000 pounds were dropped at altitudes up to 20,000 feet from the jet-propelled North American B-45 Tornado bomber at Edwards Air Force Base, Muroc, Calif.

MacArthur Arming Japan, Pravda Says

MOSCOW, Sept. 3 (U.P.)—The Communist Party paper Pravda today charged Gen. Douglas MacArthur with rearming Japan for aggression and called attention to the 30-year Russian-Chinese treaty, whose announced purpose is to curb aggression in the Far East.

MacArthur, Pravda declared flatly, was rapidly rearming the "so-called Japanese police force" of 300,000 men and was "hastening to dispatch Japanese mercenaries to fight in Korea."

The article pointedly went into detail on the mutual aid part of the treaty under which Russia and China pledged to come to the aid of the other in event either is attacked by Japan or "any state allied with her."

The article, written on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of Japan's formal surrender (September 2), asserted that the Soviet Union played the "decisive role" in defeating Japan and will guard the peace in the Far East.

Pravda accused America of blocking a Japanese peace treaty because American rulers are relying principally on Japan as a base for military adventures against the Soviet Union and the national liberation movements of Asia." The Americans are "even more impudent aggressors than the Japanese Samurais," Pravda added.

In the most violent attack on United States Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews yet to appear in the Soviet press, Red Fleet described him as "one of the most thick-skulled, most reactionary armor bearers of Wall Street."

Red Fleet's article on Matthews was the first public Soviet reaction to his "preventive war" speech in Boston August 25. The article apparently did not mention the speech itself.

Matthews, "an aronist in the role of Secretary of the Navy, is one of the most active incendiaries of a new world war, an irreconcilable enemy of the Soviet Union . . . one of the principal war criminals of the United States Navy," Red Fleet said.

The United States Navy as a whole, the publication said, is permeated with a feeling of racial discrimination and racial superiority. Its officers and men are being indoctrinated to believe in their manifest destiny to impose the American way of life on the whole world, Red Fleet said.

Reds Hit Truman Talk As Cover for Aggression

MOSCOW, Sept. 3 (AP).—Pravda said today President Truman's speech to the Nation Friday was just another attempt to justify the aggressive foreign policy of the United States—in particular American armed intervention in Korea.

The paper, organ of the Communist Party, said the speech contained attacks on the U. S. S. R., "to which Truman attempted to ascribe a nonexisting lack of desire for international cooperation."

Greeks Fear Outbreak of Red Activity

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 3 (U.P.)—Informed government and defense quarters said today all signs point to a renewal of Communist agitation to overthrow the Greek government, including possibly a revival of guerilla activity.

The new Red "offensive," officials said, was marked by these developments:

1. The Soviet U. N. delegate's proposal to the Security Council July 30 in which he raised the question of "terrorism in Greece."

2. The simultaneous arrival from Albania of a Polish-trained Communist band with orders to form an advance group of the Communist Party in Greece to disseminate propaganda and incite workers to strike.

3. The recent declaration by Greek Communist Leader Dimitris Vladas that Greek guerilla bands "are ready again to bring freedom to the country." The declaration was broadcast by the Greek Communist radio, believed to be located in Romania.

The developments prompted Premier Sophocles Venizelos to comment: "It is evident that Malik's move in the Security Council and the entrance of a Communist band from Albania form part of a coordinated Cominform plan against Greece, which the Greek government will meet wth all the means at its disposal."

Gen. McNarney Backs Strategic Bombing, Unification Savings

Use of strategic bombing and unification of the armed forces were defended yesterday by Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, USAF, chairman of the management committee of the office of Secretary of Defense.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the National Exchange Club at the Hotel Statler, General McNarney said that because of development of a single budget for the armed forces, "we were able to prepare in 18 days a budget which more than doubled our national defense program" when the Korean emergency arose.

"The defense establishment," said General McNarney, "has never contended any war could be won by strategic bombing alone. But lest our Monday morning quarterbacks confuse us, it has contended that the cabability to deliver immediate and terrible retaliation against a major aggressor is essential."

The Air Force general said one by-product of unification has been that the airlines of the service have been "taken out of the junket business and their entire operation pointed toward improving their readiness for D-Day."

General McNarney said he has reached two major conclusions as a result of the United States' role in World War II.

1. "Our demonstrated ability to mobilize unsurpassed military strength should serve as a warning to nations with aggressive intent.

2. "Our native urge to demobilize our great forces on completion of the immediate task assigned, rather than glory in military might and accomplishment, should reassure the world of our fundamental devotion to ways of peace."

Earlier, delegates to the thirty-second annual convention of the Exchange Club heard Henry P. Chandler, director of the administrative office of the United States Courts, discuss the attitude of the courts toward probation.

Chandler said that seven or eight boys placed on probation have fulfilled the conditions of their probation. He pointed out that youths between the ages of 18 and 23, representing 20 percent of the population, have been responsible for 63 percent of interstate auto thefts.

A study recently completed in northern Alabama of youths who have served out their probation, Chandler said, showed that only 2 percent had got into trouble within five years after the probationary term was completed.

2 Reporters Riding in Jeep Wounded in Red Ambush

Md., with his wife, Ruth, and their three children, John, 16, Barbara, 15, and Susan, 19 months.]

We had left the battlefield east of Yongsan after watching the First Marine Brigade try to reduce the Communist bridgehead east of the Naktong River. A torrential rain had drenched us, and we faced the dismal prospect of a night-long ride over a mountain road to Pusan.

None of us had the slightest fear of an ambush, once we had left the immediate front. There have been instances of Communist guerilla bands penetrating ten miles behind the American lines and causing mischief. But we reached Miryang before nightfall and felt reasonably confident we were out of danger.

Region Infested With Reds

It developed we knew very little of the country we were to traverse, for our route took us through the heart of a region where the Communists have many sympathizers. Unknown to us, there had been a series of nightly ambushes on the narrow, twisting road between Samangjin and Wondong.

On Friday night, three South Korean soldiers were killed and seven wounded in an ambush on this lonely stretch. On Saturday night, five American soldiers had to shoot their way out of a roadblock.

East of Samangjin the road curves away from the Naktong and climbs a high ridge. We reached the summit without trouble and began a steep descent. It was still raining very hard and the night was so black we had to keep our headlights blazing. None of us knew the road and as there was the added hazard of washouts, our driver, a South Korean, held the speed down to 10 miles an hour.

Halfway down the slope is a hairpin turn and just beyond this curve the road is cluttered with boulders. It was ideal for ambush. A driver yielding to panic probably would wreck his vehicle against the steep incline on the left or plunge into the ravine at the right.

We had rounded the curve and were approaching the rough spot when the guerillas opened fire. One bullet penetrated the windshield and passed between Valentine and myself. It had been fired from some type of automatic small-arms weapon and the gunner was somewhere ahead of us. Another gun opened fire from our rear and scored at least two hits on the jeep. The firing continued until we stopped the jeep and turned off the lights.

Reds Lose Target

This was a terrible moment of decision. There was a single carbine in the jeep, but it was solely for morale purposes. It wouldn't shoot. We had our choice of abandoning the jeep and lying in a ditch or proceeding down the road with headlights ablaze—an easy target.

We chose the latter. Without arms, our chances of survival, had we stayed, were more risky than going ahead.

Fortunately, the Reds had ceased firing. They had lost the target in the sudden cutting off of our lights. Perhaps it was just as well the carbine wouldn't shoot. They start we nearly left de Truenne beresumed fire.

But we couldn't stay there forever. It was too damn lonely. We yelled some confused and contradictory instructions to the driver, who knew perhaps a dozen words of English. After some agonizing moments he caught the idea we wanted to get out of there.

We tried it first without lights, but we slid into a ditch and the rear wheels spun sickeningly without taking hold. The two French correspondents leaped out and started pushing while Valentine threw the jeep into four-wheel drive. A good lurch put us back on the road.

"Don't Leave Me"

But we needed lights and Valentine had to snap them on. As soon as he did, the sub-machine guns chattered again. In our haste to would have picked up the flash and hind. We heard him shouting, "Don't leave me!" Potter reached out and helped him into the jeep.

Valentine's expert driving took us around a bend in the road and we breathed easier. Neither Potter nor de Tremonville realized at first they had been hit, and it was not until we reached Wondong that Potter discovered his leg wound.

[On July 10, less than a week after his arrival in Korea, Bigart was one of three reporters to cover an action involving a small American force on a hill overlooking Chonui. He was the only newspaperman to get out alive. The others, Ray Richards of International News Service and Corpl. Ernie Peeler of Stars and Stripes, were killed.]

CAIRO, Sept. 3 (AP).—Foreign Minister Mohammed Salah Eddin told a news conference today Egypt has no intention of bringing the British-Egyptian question before the United Nations. The two countries have been discussing Egypt's demand that British troops get out of the Suez Canal zone and that the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan be united with Egypt.

Lodge for Qualified Troop Aid to Allies

By the United Press

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) proposed yesterday that the United States offer to send more troops to Western Europe on condition that Atlantic Pact allies take realistic steps to increase their own armed forces.

He said in an interview the troop aid should be placed on a proportionate basis: For example, one United States Army division for each 10 new divisions raised by the Western European powers.

Well-informed Senate sources speculated that the Administration may already be planning to lay such a program before the Atlantic Pact foreign ministers meeting in New York later this month.

They said that may be one reason why President Truman, in his radio report to the Nation Friday night, raised the military mobilization goal to three million men and maybe more.

Lodge, a leading Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, applauded Mr. Truman's announcement and repeated his pleas that a United States Army of at least 30 divisions be raised to discourage aggression by Russia in Europe or in Asia.

"We've got permanent peace within our grasp," he said. "We should put up with a little inconvenience and sacrifice to avoid World War III. It would be well worth it."

John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner for Germany, arrived here last week for top-level consultations in preparation for the foreign ministers meeting. He was reported to have brought proposals for sending at least two more United States divisions to Germany, and for permitting the West German Republic to organize a semimilitary federal police force.

Lodge indicated that he believes any additional American troops sent to Europe should be stationed in Germany.

"Our strength should be as far east in Europe as possible," he said. "If we have to fight it would be better to fight on the Elbe than on the Rhine. I would be happier if there was an Oder River line (in Eastern Germany, which is now occupied by Russia.)"

'Electrical' Virus Defense Is Indicated

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—A Denver scientist tonight reported a new theory of virus invasion of human cells, based on a form of atomic attraction, which he said may have "far-reaching implications" in the prevention and treatment of virus diseases.

Some familiar diseases believed caused by viruses are polio, influenza, yellow fever, virus pneumonia, measles and mumps.

Dr. Theodore T. Puck, head of the biophysics department at the University of Colorado Medical Center, reported the theory to the American Chemical Society on the eve of the organization's one hundred and eighteenth natonal meeting.

Puck said the theory grew from a discovery that a virus attack upon a specific cell is a two-step process.

In the first step, he said, the virus becomes attached to the "target" cell as the result of a purely electrical attraction by charged metallic atoms—or ions—normally present in the cell's environment.

Further, Puck said, laboratory studies with radioactive tracers have shown it is possible to block this atomic attraction by introducing certain other metallic ions not ordinarily present in the cell.

"Zinc in particular," the report said, "can render cells which are extremely susceptible to invasion by the particular virus studied completely immune."

Puck said a thorough understanding of the action of the blocking ions "may lead to new methods of protection against invasion by different kinds of virus disease."

Raid on Red China Struck Boundary, Peiping Alleges

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3 (AP).—A Chinese Communist broadcast from Peiping today disclosed that the so-called raid by United States fighter planes on Chinese territory August 29 actually took place on the Yalu River which forms the boundary between Korea and Manchuria.

The broadcast, heard by the Associated Press in San Francisco, said four United States Mustang fighters hit one of seven junks being hauled upstream by a dozen men. The junk was said to be "only two meters (less than 7 feet) from the right bank of the Yalu River which forms the boundary."

The right bank is the Manchurian side.

The Communist broadcast said the American planes dived to less than 40 feet and one Mustang strafed the boat being towed. The owner was killed and two others wounded. In another attack only 5 minutes later, it alleged, another boat was strafed from about 60 feet. Three boatmen were killed and five wounded in the second attack, Peiping said.

Formosa Sees U. S. Appeasing Red China

TAIPEI, Formosa, Sept. 3 (U.P.)—Nationalist officials expressed resentment today at what they said sounded like United States appeasement of the Chinese Communist government.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson on August 30 said the United States was trying to discourage Chinese Communist participation in Korea and said the United States felt no hostility toward the Chinese and had no aggressive intentions in the Far East.

President Truman the next day expressed hope Communist China would not intrude in Korea and said the United States Seventh Fleet would be wihtdrawn from Formosa when the Korean conflict was settled.

Both statements followed Communist charges that the United States had commtted an aggression by stationing naval and air units in Formosa and accusations that United States planes had struck targets in Manchuria.

The Nationalists said United States "appeasement" was likely to encourage Communist aggression and was likely to disappoint or even alienate anti-Communists in the Far East, specially those on the Chinese mainland.

In view of what the Nationalists considered "appeasement," the officials said that any unilateral action on part of the United States Government to alter the June 27 arrangements or affecting Chinese sovereignty would not be acceptable to the Natonalist government or the general public.

U. S. Reported Speeding Aid To Indo-China

By The Associated Press

The United States was reported yesterday to be speeding its arms aid to Indo-China in the expectation of a new crisis within a few weeks in that sector of the Asiatic front.

Reports from American and French sources forecast, officials said, that Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh is getting ready to launch a long-prepared offensive against the French and Allied Vietnam forces by October 1 or soon thereafter.

By that date weather conditions, which currently are balking any Chinese Communist invasion of Formosa, are expected to become favorable for a renewal of large-scale fighting in Indo-China.

Ho, according to State Department and Pentagon advices, is being heavily reinforced by his Chinese backers for what his Viet Minh radio has proclaimed as a decisive "conquer offensive" against the "imperialists."

To help meet the threat, the United States already has poured a substantial stream of arms and military supplies into the country which many consider the key to all southeast Asia. Further shipments are en route. Still to go, it is reported, are numerous naval landing craft which are being reconditioned at Mare Island, Calif., and in the Puget Sound area, with crews in training to sail them across the Pacific.

Red Plot to Kill U. S. Envoy Heath Is Confirmed

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Police officially confirmed today that they had discovered a Communist underground plot to assassinate United States Minister Donald R. Heath.

Police said a 30-man section of the Viet Minh guerilla army in the Saigon neighborhood had been assign to the job. A captured document outlining the plot has been turned over to the U. S. Legation, police said.

Police officials indicated there had been some arrests, but asked newsmen to withhold details for security reasons. Reliable sources last night had said that one suspect confessed.

Under the careful watch of two French Surete bodyguards, Heath drove to his office this morning as usual.

Since the U. S. pledged arms and money to the French to wipe out the Communist rebels, the Viet Minh radio and other Red propaganda organs have attacked Americans as "imperialists" with increasing violence.

Schuman Rebukes Reds for Boycott Of Heart Meeting

PARIS, Sept. 3 (AP).—Foreign Minister Robert Schuman today rebuked the Communist countries for boycotting the first international congress of heart specialists.

"We believe medical science has no frontiers," he said in an address to nearly 1000 heart specialists from 32 Western countries at opening ceremonies in the Sorbonne University.

Prof. Paul D. White, of Boston, Mass., said American heart specialists will seek to compare notes with Europeans on the progress made in fighting heart ailments.

British Pan Novel by Hemingway

LONDON, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—British book critics panned the new Ernest Hemingway novel "Across the River and Into the Trees" today in terms unparalleled in a long, long time.

The tabloid Daily Graphic's W. J. Brown, former Independent Member of Parliament, headlined his article: "This is an Evil Book" and said, "I think Mr. Hemingway can depend on Stalin buying the film rights of his book and probably awarding him the Red Star."

The Sunday Times said simply it was "An American Tragedy."

The Graphic's attack was aimed primarily at Hemingway's disparaging comment—through the medium of his main character—on Allied generals in World War II. In particular, it deplored his attacks on British generals and the fighting ability of British soldiers.

Critic Brown said authors must be free to sicken if they wish. Though there are places more appropriate to this than within the pages of a book.

Pact Deputies Draft Program To Produce Arms

LONDON, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Working "like the devil," the North Atlantic Pact Council of Deputies has worked out a short-term program of arms production designed to meet the immediate needs of western Europe, an authoritative source said today.

The deputies' meeting adjourned here late last night after an intensive 12-day session. The deputies will meet again in New York September 13 to complete the report which they will present to the Foreign Ministers of the Atlantic Pact countries.

20,000 Expected to Wish Gaithersburg Happy Birthday

More than 20,000 people are expected to crowd tiny Gaithersburg, Md., today when it holds a day-long celebration marking the town's 100th anniversary.

The crowd estimate was made by Kenneth Barncord, general chairman of the centennial celebration.

Joining Gaithersburg in the celebration will be the adjacent town of Washington Grove, with both towns gaily decorated for the occasion.

At 9 a. m. the day will get under way with athletic events at the Washington Grove Recreation Center, and at 10 a. m. there will be a riding tournament on the Gaithersburg High School grounds.

Open for Inspection

At noon, many Gaithersburg business concerns will be open for the inspection of visitors, and at 1:30 p. m. invited guests will be received at the Knights of Pythias Temple.

The United States Navy School of Music will regale visitors with music at the Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Fire House starting at 1:45 p. m., and at 2:30 p. m., the big parade gets under way.

According to Chairman Barncord, the parade will last about 90 minutes. It will include 9 drum corps, 9 bands with the Metropolitan Police Band and the Second Army Drum Corps among them, 18 floats, pieces of fire equipment from the surrounding area, and marching units of the Maryland National Guard.

The parade will form at the Washington Grove Recreation Center, roll down Diamond ave., and Frederick ave. to Maryland ave., then go down Russell and Brooks aves. and wind up at the Gaithersburg High School grounds.

The best fire apparatus, drum corps, floats, and bands will be judged following the parade.

Politicians vs. Businessmen

At 4:30 p. m., visitors will find a chicken dinner available at the Knights of Pythias Temple dining room. And by the time dinner has settled at 6:30 p. m., the "Montgomery Able Politicians" will tangle in a softball game with the Gaithersburg Businessmen's Association on the school grounds.

Promptly at 7:30 p. m. on the grounds, judging of a Celebration Queen will take place, followed by the chief event of the evening—a pageant depicting the history of Gaithersburg and Washington Grove.

The pageant will describe the naming of Gaithersburg after one Benjamin Gaither in 1850 — the Gaither who built the first home there in 1802. It will tell of the early days when Gaithersburg was a stopping point on the Georgetown-Frederick stage road, and how George Washington is supposed to have rested under the giant oak by the B & O overpass on Route 240.

The development of Washington Grove from a Methodist camp meeting site in 1878 to incorporation as a residential town in 1937 also will be described in the pageant.

Events will conclude with a fireworks display and a dance in the school gymnasium, both starting at 9 p.m. One hour later the Beauty Queen will be crowned.

Senators Hurl 'Police State' Accusations

By The Associated Press

Charges of "police state" tactics were hurled yesterday between Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) and Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) over their sharply differing plans for dealing with home-front Communists.

Mundt is one of the architects of a section of a sweeping omnibus anti-subversives bill which would require registration of Communist political and front organizations. Kilgore says interning Reds in time of national emergency would work better.

The omnibus measure, on which the Senate will start debate Tuesday, was put together by Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee from five separate Senate and House bills. It goes far afield from proposals advanced by President Truman for internal security.

Kilgore wants to rip out the registration section. He and other Senators are trying to work out a plan to replace it with authority to throw known Communists into internment camps when the President and Congress declare a national emergency.

"This is an attempt to kill the (McCarran) bill by writing into it police state methods," Mundt said of the Kilgore plan. "They are adopting the tactics of the Gestapo and the OGPU."

Earlier, in disclosing his tentative plan to reporters in a separate interview, Kilgore charged: "Registration is just a damned harassment and a police state method with no real effect in the case of an emergency."

He took the position that internment of Communists, plus giving the FBI all necessary additional personnel, would properly safeguard the Nation against espionage and sabotage in time of crisis.

His idea is to give the Government authority to seize and put in camps all Communists or persons who had been Communists within 18 months prior to the emergency.

This would be done with the idea of having machinery in operation whereby the dangerous ones would remain interned and those who could convince a court or an appeals board they were not dangerous could be released.

Open Jail Door Reply of S. C. To Klan Boast

CONWAY, S. C., Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Authorities said today a wide-open jail door for gun toting Ku Klux Klansmen is their answer to a grand dragon's boast that his sheeted followers are ready to meet gunfire with gunfire.

Sheriff C. E. Sasser already had a dozen Klansmen under arrest on charges of inciting a bullet-singed riot in a Negro district of nearby Myrtle Beach a week ago. He said he will corral more Klansmen when he learns their names.

Among the nine defendants free under bond was Grand Dragon Thomas Hamilton, who claimed the Negroes not only "dared" the Klan to "ride" past their dance hall but started the shooting, in which a robed Conway cop was killed.

Sasser cleared the Negroes of blame in the death of Policeman James D. Johnston during the flare-up of violence in front of a Negro dance hall and said his investigation indicated Klansmen fired every shot.

Lawn Doused With Oil, Ordered Out by KKK

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—A 36-year-old Negro garage mechanic told police today that his front lawn, sidewalk and flower garden had been doused with crankcase oil be someone who left a note reading: "KKK Get out."

Reginal Bishop, who moved into a house in South Ozone Park, Queens, with his wife and two teen-aged sons four months ago, said he was the only Negro living in that block. His home is within a few blocks of South Jamaica, which has a large Negro population.

Bishop said he had no intention of moving.

Sen. Smith Says Korea Job Won't End at 38th Parallel

By the United Press

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) said yesterday that foreign military aid will cost the United States at least six billion dollars a year for at least two or three years.

He said the costs of rearming North Atlantic Pact allies and other anti-Communist free nations will come on top of domestic defense spending of up to 30 million dollars a year.

Smith, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, made the forecast in a radio interview.

Congress now is preparing to act on President Truman's request for four billion dollars in foreign arms aid, in addition to the $1,222,500,000 voted earlier. Smith made plain that this outlay is only the first installment of a program to build up the defenses of Western Europe, Iran, the Philippines and other danger spots.

It is a dangerous delusion to think that World War III is "inevitable," Smith said, and added that there is basis for hoping and believing that Russia is unready for war.

He said United Nations forces fighting in Korea should be able to drive back the North Korean invaders to the thirty-eighth Parallel "within a few months" if Russia and Communist China stay out of the fighting.

Even then, he said, the job will not be over.

"Our objective in Korea must be the liberation of the whole country and the solid establishment of a unified self-governing republic protected by the United Nations," he said.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

TODAY being Labor Day, our establishment is, of course, closed. It is also the last day of our annual week-long vacation. My desk is covered with postcards reading "Having a fine time. But the food here isn't as good as we fix in our kitchen at 19th and K!" and "Be glad you're not here. The eating is lousy" and "The Bay looks nice, but the dining room isn't air-conditioned." All this makes me feel very smug and satisfied. When a restaurateur's own help misses the chef's cooking and the peace and quiet of the "home" dining room, his must be a pretty good place in which to eat . . . and work!

Tomorrow we will again be open for business, as usual. And next Monday in this column, it will give me great pleasure to announce the winner of my "slogan contest." This "contest," you might recall, was to find a slogan that would inspire the taxicab-riding public to greater generosity in tipping. The response has been surprising. More entries were received than I had reasonable right to expect. Sometime between now and Monday, it will be my happy duty to notify the winner of his good fortune, and arrange the filet mignon feast that he (or she) so justly deserves. Watch for next Monday's column for all the news.

They say that when one is on vacation, all thought of business should be left behind. But this business of being a restaurateur is not one that can be readily . . . or pleasantly . . . forgotten. You meet such nice people in a place like ours, and I'm frank to admit that after a couple of days of hibernation, I'm always restless to get back and greet old friends again. Ruminating on this, I flattered myself into believing that perhaps there are Washingtonians who miss Parchey's, too, when we close for our annual vacation. I kept thinking of scores of hungry trenchermen sitting around impatiently, hardly able to stand their enforced separation from our filets mignon. And then I thought of the treat in store for them when we reopen tomorrow. Visualizing my own idea of the perfect dinner, I conjured up this menu . . . which I hope I'll have an opportunity to serve you soon: (1) A crisp, clear, sparkling-clean, dry Martini to relax you and arouse your appetite. (2) A rich, juicy pickled herring in toothsome wine sauce, crowned with a generous daub of thick sour cream. (3) A filet mignon, done exactly to your own taste, full of ruby juice, crackling-hot, oozing its delicious succulence and smothered in a blanket of mushroom sauce, concocted with creamery butter and wine. (4) A great mound of crispy, golden-brown French fried potatoes. (5) Salad Chef Wilbur Smith's own incomparable Rocquefort dressing on hearts of lettuce. (6) The famous Parchey roll basket. (7) An individual, deep dish Apple Pie, topped with a great blob of Fussell's sweet vanilla ice cream. (8) A steaming cup of fragrant Swing's Mesco coffee. Tomorrow night, you yourself can enjoy such a meal at Parchey's. Why not treat yourself, and your favorite companion? We'll treat you like King and Queen! Our address: 19th at K St. N.W.

Vacation days are nice, it's true,
I like them just as much as you;
But though my yoke is wearing thin,
I'm glad to get back in . . . again!

World Series Tallulah's Next?

By Richard L. Coe

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE: Tallulah Bankhead, gowned in a capacious towel, sits in her Westchester forest fortress every afternoon and listens to the ball game . . . The Giants, of course . . . And every time things look black at the Polo Grounds, snap goes the lid of the portable set . . . She prowls about with it in silence for a while, then sneaks the top open again . . . "That's two outs and two strikes for the Giants" proclaims the announcer . . . "I can't stand it," cries Tallulah and heads for the pool . . . There's a deal on now for Tallulah to do the commentary each day of the World Series; it sounded like a casual request at first, but there's talk of paying her $25,000 . . . "I'll do it for nothing," she crackles, "if the Giants cop the pennant." . . . Though radio and TV are on the lady's schedule for fall, she's mighty excited about a new play, not Rodney Acklund's new version of "Hedda Gabbler" nor the Parisian "Nina," but one from a man who wrote one of the biggest hits of a generation ago . . . On the wagon and in a diet, Tallulah's looking grand, though she hates you to tell her so, and her only worry is that the law case involving her former secretary will come up the very week rehearsals will start for her new vehicle.

CECILE SOREL, a Societaire of the Comedie-Francaise since 1904 and the star of the Comedie's last American tour, has retired to a convent in Bayonne, where she has taken the cloth in the Third Order of St. Francis . . . After a year's novitiate the celebrated actress-society leader (as the Comtesse de Segur) and Bankhead of her day, will become a nun . . . Now 75, she's taken a path frequently followed by French actresses.

THE FREDRIC MARCHES have accepted the cochairmanship of the Toy Theater Clubs of the United States, now being formed by the Pollock's American representative, the Children's Museum of Washington. . . . Sir Ralph Richardson heads the English counterpart. . . . Thursday and Friday afternoons this week demonstration performances of the Pollock miniature stages will be given at the Chevy Chase Library, starting both afternoons at 2 o'clock . . . Bruce Fredrickson will give scenes from "The High Toby," which J. B. Priestley wrote especially for these toy theaters; assisting him will be 10-year-old David Freyman, son of the Olney Theater's Evelyn Freyman. . . . Others on the program will be Tommy Kilpatrick and Lowell Swortzell. . . . Quite a hobby; give it a look.

ZASU PITTS, arriving this morning for Olney's "Post Road," probably will have to explain again why her first name is spelled "ZaSu"—her mother diplomatically combined the first names of two of her aunts, Eliza and Susan. . . . Sol Jacobson, the New York p.r. whiz explains why he's moved to 229 West 42d: "My old roost, the Hudson Theater, sold down the river to NBC-TV." . . . Nancy Carroll got Jean Muir's "Mother Aldrich" part on that TV show. . . . Charles Laughton and Rosalind Russell will start the new Theater Guild of the Air series next Sunday night with "Edward, My Son." . . . Aside to a reader who writes "not for publication": yclept, the past participle, was supposed to make you smile.

FRANK BOUCHER insists that his Apex patrons will go for "Gigi," the champagny heroine of Colette, who'll be on his screen Wednesday and Thursday; "adult and spicy," he wires, and rightly. . . . Mervin Conn, the accordion player of "Going Native," is the Mervin Conn who runs a wheeze-box school on 14th street. . . . Scott Kirkpatrick, the Gayety man, back from Atlantic City's Million Dollar Pier Theater, where "The Respectful Prostitute" seems determined to stick out the month.

"LARLANDA," that lovely sloe-eyed dancer in "Going Native" is really Lark Curtis of the Broadmoor; her name's part of her own and part of her childhood idol and friend, Yolanda, of the Veloz and Yolanda team. . . . For the final hillbilly moonlight cruise of the season, the Grand Ole Opry folks and Connie B. Gay are shifting to the Mount Vernon of the Wilson Line; the trip's 8:30 Thursday night. . . . Lester Rawlins, who starts his final Tony Lumpkin week tonight in the Arena's "She Stoops to Conquer," has his Equity membership, but, like many another, has to use another name in non-Equity work.

TERRY RAMSAYE has started a new comment column in the Motion Picture Herald; his first pounces on Senator Johnson's resolution that "films directed or produced by totalitarian-minded movie men should be banned from interstate commerce." . . . This, says Ramsaye, is like voting against sin. . . . Pat Fleming, of Round Pond, Arkansas, claims he has the smallest successful theater in the land; he's counted the noses of Round Pond and comes up with a total population of 56. . . . Frankie Parker, the tennis whiz, now 34, says he's going in for movie acting; his first part's a reporter for "Ace in the Hole."

"GOING NATIVE": Marguerite Sparks, Jack Stoll and Jean Hartman face their Washington neighbors in the Capitol's annual stage revue of local performers, "Going Native." With 40 in the company, the stage show continues on F st. through Wednesday

Sacredness Of Human Life Questioned

BIRMINGHAM, England, Sept. 3 (AP).—An outspoken Church of England bishop questioned tonight "the doctrine that human life is inherently sacred."

Dr. E. W. Barnes, Bishop of Birmingham, told a meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science that he could "give no confident answer" to the question of euthanasia (mercy killing) for what he called "tainted" human stock. But he asked:

"Is human life always sacred, whatever its qualities or circumstances?

"Would God, as Christ revealed Him, under all circumstances disapprove of euthanasia?"

Dr. Barnes has previously urged sterilization of the unfit by law and birth control as a national policy.

Dr. Barnes blamed over-population as a principal cause of unrest throughout the world.

"I put to you the thought that the old command 'be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth' could be deemed divine so long as the world needed more human beings," he said.

"This primitive need has passed. Now the world needs more good human stock, but inferior stocks are increasing far too rapidly and are a menace to the future.

"Half a century ago, most churches condemned birth control as immoral. Today only the most reactionary maintain that view in this country.

"There seem to be signs that the Roman Catholic Church is modifying its attitude even in southern Italy.

The bishop said "clergymen and others of undoubted sincerity and Christian earnestness are pressing" for the legislation of mercy killing.

War is no soluton to the problem of over-population, the churchman said.

"The use of atomic weapons might empty an overcrowded world but it would bring grave suffering" of which no Christian could approve "and which no human being could rightly excuse."

2 Jets Collide, Pilots Killed

MARIETTA, Ga., Sept. 3 (AP).—Two jet pilots were killed today when their National Guard planes collided at terrific speed.

The planes—F-84 Thunderjets—were part of a four-plane formation on a training flight from Dobbins Air Force Base. Maj. Walter M. Armistead, operations officer, said they crashed 25,000 feet up at more than 500 miles an hour.

The dead were First Lieuts. Kenneth M. Goodrum, 26, of Atlanta, and Tom A. Martin, 25, Griffin, Ga.

Their bodies fell a mile apart and the wreckage of their planes a mile and a half. The crash was three miles from the base.

One plane exploded and burned. The other pancaked on a wooded hillside without burning.

Dense black smoke arose from the flaming plane and led to erroneous reports it had set a forest fire. Only dry grass and weeds caught fire from the wreckage.

Wreckage Believed That Of Missing Fighter

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Plane wreckage believed to be that of a Navy Corsair fighter that vanished Friday was found off Plum Island today, the Coast Guard reported.

Navy and Coast Guard air and surface craft concentrated search in the area in an effort to find Lieut. (JG)) Robert W. Haller, 27, of New Durham, N. H., pilot of the missing craft. He took off from Squantum Naval Air Station on a training flight and never returned.

Labor Day

Americans should take pride in the fact that everybody participates in the celebration of Labor Day, not merely organized labor which was responsible for its institution. The universality of the tribute paid to labor on this holiday is in sharp contrast with those European May Day celebrations that are so often marred by riots and bloodshed. In the United States working men and women are, as President Truman said in his Labor Day message, "partners in a living democracy." They are not a special group or class separated from the rest of the community by social barriers or political and organizational affiliations. As partners in a joint enterprise American workers have made tremendous contributions to the general welfare, and American living standards are, as a result, the envy of other nations.

It would be a grave error, however, to take for granted that the benefits that labor has secured through past efforts insure future gains. For growth and progress, the President warns, are only possible in a world at peace. That peace is threatened by Communist aggression which the United States is pledged to resist. To fulfill this pledge we shall have to devote a much larger proportion of our resources to the production of goods for defense purposes. That will entail sacrifices on the part of the civilian population that will, no doubt, be reflected in a temporary lowering of labor's living standards, however high the rate of productivity may be.

The President's confidence that American working men and women stand ready to carry their share of the effort required to erect defenses against aggression is, in our opinion, well-founded. It is by no means certain, however, that all workers realize that the rewards of their toil will also have to be shared with others, if the United States is to meet its commitments at home and abroad. Strikes are already holding up production of essential defense materials, and wage demands to offset increases in living costs are multiplying. The increasing number of wage disputes emphasizes the importance of arresting inflation and equalizing the sacrifices that employers and workers alike must make to defeat an aggressive Communist movement "which reduces the workingman to slavery wherever it attains power."

Reply To Montgomery

In a letter to the editor published in an adjoining column Donald Montgomery, director of the Washington office of the United Automobile Workers, accuses The Washington Post of trying to put the blame on Walter Reuther for the wage price "merry-go-round" that we discussed in an editorial on August 30. Mr. Montgomery's assumption that The Washington Post blames labor for the price increases that have led to demands for wage increases is utterly unwarranted. The purpose of the editorial was to emphasize the futility of attempting to fight inflation by such means. As we then stated, "Experience has shown that wage increases, if substantial, are with few exceptions followed by price increases." That is a hard fact that labor cannot afford to forget, regardless of whether prices have to be raised to offset higher production costs or advance simply because the seller can get more.

Our correspondent also misinterprets our criticism of Reuther's statement that GM's decision not to raise automobile prices in face of wage increases "clearly demonstrates that current profits margins are sufficiently high to permit the establishment of a more equitable wage relationship without inflationary price increases." We objected to this sweeping generalization because it implied that what GM and other highly profitable automobile concerns could do to set an example that other industries should and could follow. We did not say, and did not imply, that the price increases that have resulted in current demands for wage adjustments are not inflationary, as our correspondent charges. On the contrary, The Washington Post has repeatedly stressed the fact that recent price increases have been caused in large part by profiteering, facilitated by scare buying and hoarding.

We do not believe that either labor or industry is primarily responsible for the current inflation. Many workers are in a position to demand and obtain wage increases and many employers are in a position to charge higher prices for their products, because the demand for labor and for goods is expanding rapidly, sustained by a high level of income and a savings backlog accumulated during the war when deficit financing resulted in huge increases in the volume of bank deposits and currency. Inflation cannot be licked by merely shifting this expanded purchasing power from the hands of one group of consumers to another. What is required is an over-all reduction in consumer demands. That is why we believe that higher taxes and tighter credit restrictions are more effective means of fighting inflation than over-all price controls. The former strikes at the basic causes of inflation by reducing consumer purchasing power; the latter attempts to control prices without correcting the conditions that are primarily responsible for inflation.

Mr. Montgomery needs to be reminded that The Washington Post has called attention repeatedly to the failure of Congress to plug tax loopholes. He conveniently forgets, too, that the proposed restoration of wartime individual income-tax rates did not involve any changes in the tax structure and was accompanied by increases in taxes on corporations. In the "Merry-Go-Round" editorial we made it clear that we favored further increases in taxes on corporate profits. Our reasons for objecting to a "hastily concocted" excess profits tax plan have been set forth in some detail in previous editorials, and space does not permit of repetition.

There is room for honest differences of opinion concerning the type of taxation required to produce needed revenue without imposing unduly heavy burdens on any group of taxpayers. But there is no justification whatever for our correspondent's assumption that The Washington Post's opposition to immediate application of over-all controls and hasty imposition of taxes on excess profits betrays an antilabor bias.

Fireside Chat

President Truman last Friday night capped a week of restating his own Far Eastern policy and regaining his own prerogative in the conduct of it. The Fireside Chat was late in coming, and he himself seems to realize his own tardiness, for he promised the American people a repeat performance soon. It is his duty so to report during this time of quickening crisis—to make the American purpose clear, to assert the will to prevail.

The presidential talk coincided with the summary suspension of another preventive warrior, Maj. Gen. Orvil Anderson, head of the Air War College at Montgomery, Ala. Mr. Truman repudiated this immoral doctrine. Preventive war, he said, "is the weapon of dictators, not of free democratic countries like the United States." He made this statement in the form of the seventh point in an eight-point program on America's Far Eastern policy.

There was nothing bellicose in the President's speech. But it was firm and so simple that the world as well as the American people know precisely where this country stands. Lack of such clarity was the fatal error of the democracies between wars. Hitler walked into the Rhineland in 1936 without let or hindrance, and his generals, amazed that Britain and France failed to stop him, became enchanted with what they called his "somnambulistic sureness." Stalin on a similar venture was stopped at Berlin and again in Korea. There should be no further doubt that the United States will keep up the fight to sustain the peace against aggression.

This applies no less against the Chinese Communists than against the Stalinists. If they join the aggressors in Korea, then they will feel the full weight of the American wrath, which doubtless would include the use of the atom bomb. So far the authorities have been restrained in the employment of this reserve weapon out of a reluctance to overuse American power in Korea. But that hesitation would vanish, in our opinion, in case of any aggression in Korea launched by the Peking government. It is well for the sake of peace to make this unmistakable.

The Chinese Communists, if they are not completely under the spell of Stalin influence, know that this country is now committed to nonintervention in China. Mr. Truman has put on the record his willingness to make amends for any accidental bombing in Manchuria. Let them contrast this frankness and open dealing with the mischief-making that Moscow wishes to settle upon them. Mr. Truman wants to save Chinese lives, not to throw them into a conflagration, and he has given the Chinese the choice—if they are still free to make one.

Origin Of The Fourteenth Amendment

To what extent is the Fourteenth Amendment a guarantee of civil rights? For more than four score years judges, lawyers and scholars have been debating this question without bringing forth any complete or definite answer. Because of the importance of the Fourteenth Amendment in this respect, we may assume that the debate will go on indefinitely. But it is significant that able scholars, digging into the background out of which this amendment grew, are coming up with detailed answers to some of the questions on which judges, writers and commentators have gone astray in the past.

Nearly three years ago four justices of the Supreme Court came out with a flat affirmation, in Adamson v. California, that a major purpose of the Fourteenth Amendment was to make the Bill of Rights applicable to the States. One more vote would have made that view the law of the land. And that would have actually undermined our Federal system; for the Fourteenth Amendment gives Congress sweeping power to make its terms effective by legislation. Presumably Congress would have suddenly acquired power to legislate for the States on any matter covered in the Bill of Rights. The consequences, according to Prof. Stanley Morrison of Stanford University, "would have been drastic and would have required a major readjustment in the processes of State government."

In defending the position taken by himself and Justices Douglas, Murphy and Rutledge, Justice Black attached to his dissent a resume of the history of the amendment. "In my judgment," he wrote, > that history conclusively demonstrates that the language of the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment, taken as a whole, was thought by those responsible for its submission to the people, and by those who opposed its submission, sufficiently explicit to guarantee that thereafter no State would deprive its citizens of the privileges and protections of the Bill of Rights.

This appeal to history—history which the Supreme Court is accused of having previously ignored for nearly a century—stimulated at least one scholar into action. Charles Fairman, professor of law and political science at Stanford University, examined all the debates on the Fourteenth Amendment in the House and Senate; the debates on related bills in those two bodies; the debates in the State Legislatures which ratified the amendment; and a large number of the speeches made and editorials written about the amendment in 1866-68. He gave the public the benefit of his research in the December, 1949, issue of the Stanford Law Review, and the effect was to leave the justices who claimed to have resorted to history with only flimsy shreds of fact to stand on.

The finding that stands out most prominently from Professor Fairman's research is that the people did not know precisely what they were doing when they amended the Constitution to say: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . ." At no time was there any agreement as to what those privileges and immunities are. Before Congress accepted the Fourteenth Amendment it had passed the Civil Rights Act. This act assured to the recently freed slaves the right to contract, to sue, to testify, to buy, hold and sell property, and to enjoy the full and equal benefit of the laws for the security of person and property. Many had thought that it was unconstitutional for Congress to pass such an act. Consequently, the debate in the House reiterated, again and again, that the purpose of the Fourteenth Amendment was to make permanent and secure the rights enumerated in the Civil Rights Act. No one went over the guarantees of the Bill of Rights—freedom of speech and of the press, religious liberty, freedom of assembly and so forth—to claim that they were included among the "privileges and immunities" referred to.

In presenting the resolution to the Senate, Senator Jacob M. Howard did say positively that the phrase was meant to include the "personal rights guaranteed and secured by the first eight amendments of the Constitution." But this attracted little attention and was contrary to what most of the other Senators said. The Senate amended the resolution, and when it went back to the House nothing was said about the Federal Bill of Rights. Some of the opponents of the resolution insisted that it was intended to transfer all power affecting the rights of citizens from the States to the Federal Government, but this was hotly contradicted by the sponsors. The examination of many speeches, articles and editorials about the amendment, Professor Fairman concludes, also "counts heavily against the theory of incorporation."

Turning to the ratification of the amendment in the State Legislatures, Professor Fairman found almost no mention of the Bill of Rights in the messages and debates. On the contrary, several States having in their own constitutions provisions out of line with the Federal Bill of Rights adopted the amendment with no mention of the possibility that it would impinge upon their own basic laws. Five years after passage of the amendment Representative Bingham, its sponsor in the House, did say in the heat of a debate over a bill aimed at Klan outrages in the South that the privileges and immunities clause was designed to embrace the Bill of Rights. But this contradicted what he had said when the amendment was under consideration, and a colleague reminded him that he could make but could not unmake history.

Professor Fairman concludes from a wealth of detail that history is "overwhelmingly against" Justice Black's thesis, which was supposed to have been based on history, and the professor cites chapter and verse to the extent of 135 pages. Professor Morrison reaches the same conclusion from a survey of court opinions and arguments involving the Fourteenth Amendment. Regardless of how desirable it might be to have the full Bill of Rights in effect as against State action, there is no justification for misreading history or for changing the meaning of the amendment by judicial action.

Of course, the principles of the First Amendment and some other parts of the Bill of Rights are now recognized as binding upon the States by reason of the Fourteenth Amendment. But this is because the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the States from depriving any person of "life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Since the guarantees of the First Amendment applicable to the Federal Government are concerned directly with "liberty," they fit neatly into the requirement of the Fourteenth Amendment that the States shall respect every person's "liberty." But this is a very different matter from saying that the entire Bill of Rights is taken over under the vague "privileges and immunities" clause. Since the lack of historical warrant for that thesis has now been amply demonstrated, the danger of such a distortion of the amendment has probably passed. But it is not a comforting thought that four members of the court were ready to overturn the long-established view of the amendment on historical grounds without a thorough historical analysis.

"Merry-Go-Round"

Your editorial of August 30 seeks to put the blame on Walter Reuther for the wage-price merry-go-round.

Auto workers' wages are being adjusted to keep pace with the cost of living. You say this is inflationary. Apparently the price increases which forced these adjustments are not inflationary.

You are against overall price control. You are against excess profits taxes (at this time!). You say that corporations will pass along wage increases in higher prices whether they need to or not. Having ruled out effective action against inflation, you seek to put the blame on labor for doing what it can to catch up.

You "strongly dissent" from Reuther's statement that the auto companies can pay these wage adjustments without raising prices. Their enormous profits prove that they can. The companies admit that they can. They have said they will not raise prices. You offer no evidence in support of your dissent. You simply say that corporations do raise prices even when they don't have to. Presumably Reuther is to blame for that, too.

As to excess profiits taxes, you don't want them "hastily concocted." The military action in Korea was hastily concocted. The restoration of wartime individual income tax rates, starting October 1, was hastily concocted. And let me call the attention of The Washington Post to the billion dollars or more a tax evasion by wealthy taxpayers which has been authorized by new devices hastily concocted by the Senate Finance Committee. This wholesale theft was debated in the Senate all day of August 29, but not one word of the debate appears in The Washington Post of August 30.

We believe in overall control of prices. We believe that wages must keep pace with the cost of living and intend to see that they do; and we believe that productivity gains should be shared by workers in annual improvement factors and are not inflationary. And when these wage adjustments have been made, there will still be large excess profits which should be taxed.

Flood Cause

Flash floods have for the third time in 10 days caused considerable damage in the District and neighboring counties.

Anyone familiar with the elementary principles of land use knows that denuding large areas of ground of all growth-trees and grasses— makes absorption of rain impossible. Heavy rain runs off bared ground as quickly as off a paved road. This overtaxes drain installations, overflows creeks and streams.

Yet all over the city and particularly in the neighboring counties there are vast areas of ground, 40 to 100 acres at a time, completely stripped of all trees, and growth while enormous apartment developments are under construction. The first act of these builders is to strip down every tree from land that, in many instances, was heavily wooded. These construction companies should be required to make provisions for the possibility of floods caused by the denuding of the land. They should be required to leave numerous trees standing and to plant a cover crop on the ground.

"Finletter And Matthews"

I was spurred on in a fit of righteous indignation at the implication of a statement in your editorial of August 30 entitled "Finletter and Matthews." I have no quarrel with your favorable attitude toward Mr. Finletter's position. As a matter of fact, I consider it to be the sane and Christian one, although I would question, as you do, his lack of emphasis on certain types of defense preparation. But what do you mean by the statement that: "The Navy until recently at least has pictured itself as the protector of military sanity and virtue against the blitz war addicts in the Air Force?" In its context I can give it no other connotation that you consider Secretary Matthews to have been speaking the Navy's attitude. Did not Secretary Matthews himself say that he was speaking his private views?

I dare say that a number of Naval officers in high position are seething at the inclusion of that statement. Secretary Matthews may have been sending up a trial balloon for Louis Johnson, but I doubt very seriously that he was egged on by the Navy.

At any rate, I believe The Washington Post, whom I have always credited with accuracy and with honest intent, has perpetrated an act of sly mischief of which I didn't think it capable by insinuating that Matthews in his asinine outburst was representing the Navy's attitude.

"Rome And Reunion"

In my opinion your August 27 editorial "Rome and Reunion" is unintentionally unfair to the Catholic position. The Catholic Church favors a "reunion" of non-Catholic churches. Such a united church would be a good friend and a sincere opponent to the Catholic Church even if its members never returned to Catholicism. The high Anglican Church can have a reunion with Rome whenever its members accept the doctrine of papal infallibility—regardless of what some of them may at present think of the Assumption.

Most of the several hundred odd sects came into being as the result of a split from another Protestant church rather than a break from the Catholic Church. Therefore is it not entirely logical to assume that the reunion be begun among these sects rather than with the Catholic Church? Now I know that most commendable work has been done along this line. Several small churches form one and by pooling their resources much good is done for the community along social lines, clubs for young people, etc. However they never seem to get straightened out on doctrine. "We all worship together but believe the way we did before," seems to be the theme. Well, if they want to put it that way, Protestants and others may (and sometimes do) attend Catholic services for years and "worship with us" and still believe as they please—but that doesn't mean a reunion.

Televised Voice

Whoever is responsible for the idea of adding television to the State Department programs as a means of propaganda abroad should have his head examined. That an intelligent man like Representative Mansfield of Montana should deem it desirable to appoint a twelve-man committee to study this subject is shocking indeed.

During my recent ten-week trip of investigation in Europe, I was impressed with the complete absence of television antennas on the roof-tops. I never saw even one antenna, anywhere. If that is true in Western Europe, it is reasonable to assume that in the Iron Curtain countries, the ones we must reach first and foremost, television is still a thing of the distant future. The UNESCO recently reported that less than 1% of the people in the Iron Curtain countries have even short wave sets.

All this foolishness is either the work of people ignorant about conditions abroad or they are interested in promoting another silly scheme. One is reminded of Marie Antoinette who said: "If they have no bread, why don't they eat cake?" What, they have no radio sets? Let them tune in on television. Before long someone will come forward with the bright idea of showering television sets from the skies. Really, it is time for our Government officials to grow up and abandon their infantile notions.

"Crackdown"

In your editorial crackdown of August 29, you allege that "the people whose institutions rest upon the principle of civilian supremacy have reason to be grateful" to Truman for his stern stand and for "telling MacArthur who is boss." You also allege that "MacArthur went too far in his statements." Your article proves that the servicemen of America do not, and cannot enjoy "freedom of speech and expression."

The foresight of your so-called civilian supremacy has failed . . . miserably. They prove to be incompetent, bungling, and misleading. They are not men who are too interested in the welfare of their country. They appear to be more concerned with the accumulation of votes and the retention of their jobs.

What this country needs are men who are leaders . . . men with self-confidence, courage, and determination; men who are industrious, faithful, and with the ability to cooperate.

Have we a President we can admire and respect? A President that favors men like Harry Vaughan and Dean Acheson? Can we respect our Secretary of State? Can we believe in our Secretary of Defense? Have we any leaders in Washington?

U. N. Membership

On the radio this morning I learned of the revival of a U. N. plan to abolish China by granting autonomy to the embattled island from which Red fire has been unable to drive Generalissimo Chiang and all that is left of his country.

When I was a child, I was horrified to read how the Tzar of old Russia, to demonstrate his power over his subjects, called in one of his guards and ordered the man to jump out of the window, a drop of several hundred feet. Without question, the guard hastily crossed himself and jumped to his death.

Is that what membership in the U. N. means?

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Fight At Yongsan

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN KOREA.—Just beyond the MP post in the still burning village of Yongsan, there were two North Koreans with their heads blown off. The young MP cheerfully explained that they had been killed in the dawn battle, when the engineers, cooks and bakers of the Second Division, then minus almost all its regular infantry, had halted the enemy advance on Yongsan's fringe.

It had been the old story—a green American division, insufficiently trained to meet the hard test of combat, and because the training had been tender, suffering a grave first reverse. For a while it had looked as though the whole front would come apart. But again as usual, the North Koreans had been unable to press their advantage, and the Americans, in their almost bouncy way, had recovered themselves.

On the afternoon after the rout, the counter-attack was being organized.

At the turning, where the road surmounted a rise and commanded a wide prospect, a tank captain, an engineer captain and the captain of an infantry company were conferring over a map. "Jump-off time is 4:30," one of them said.

FOR THE GRAND opening, we took our positions along the tanks. The tank captain, looking a little like the hero of an interplanetary romance in his odd helmet, hurriedly explained the plan. The tanks and machine guns would cover the attack. Under the curtain of their fire, a company of engineers would take the big hill on the left. The infantry company, hastily assembled from men who had escaped from the division's overrun forward positions, would advance along the hills to the left of the valley, until they had reached a little central hill at the end.

"In two minutes, you open fire and cover the attacks," shouted the tank captain, startlingly loudly, at the end of his explanation. The men huddled on the tanks took their positions, the infantry on the road moved up a little. "Commence firing," came the next shout. The tanks and machine guns opened up deafeningly. Dust and smoke plumed upward everywhere on the hills beyond.

We scuttled across the road to the next knoll and up to the forward machine gun post, to see the infantry move out. Off to the left, across the rice paddies, the engineers were already working through the rice paddies, another thin file heartbreakingly like that turned back in the morning.

On our knoll, the infantry captain shouted, "All right, men, let's go!" The men went forward at a stumbling run over the rise, where the machine guns were chattering furiously from their emplacement behind a grave mound. The company's 1st Sergeant urged the men on, shouting, "Come on, hubba, hubba," and physically driving one or two of the attached South Koreans who hung back. Below the forward machine gun post, which was situated like the main box in an amphitheater, we could see the second thin file moving jerkily along the hills on the right.

Among the engineers on the left, a man suddenly fell. The enemy on the crest was beginning to recover from the tank and machine gun fire, to answer in kind. Another man dropped among the infantry on the right, but the engineers reached the foot of their hill and the infantry attained their first ridge. Suddenly the brisk little Chinese-American lieutenant who was directing our machine gun fire, gave the order to go forward. Carrying their disassembled weapons, the machine gunners rushed after their fellows.

THE TANK firing ceased and there was a loud rumble on the road. One, two, three, four, five tanks roared down the road, their way prepared by a tank retriever which tossed a killed, still smoking enemy tank, a left-over from the morning fighting, out of the way just under our knoll. We stood up to watch, but the North Koreans, now realizing the machine gun was gone, opened fire, and thereafter we had to lie along our dusty grave mound, or expect to hear machine gun bullets sing around us and see the earth spurt up round about.

Yet the scene was so stirring that one wanted to jump up and cheer. The engineers were one third of the way, half the way, all the way up their hill. Suddenly they were to be seen along the ridge, firing down the other side. The Infantry, meeting more resistance, took one line of hills and then the next, and moved out across rice paddies toward the hill that was their goal. The tanks, now far forward, surrounded the little hill, firing into it and the valley beyond. The foot soldiers had crossed the paddies, they had reached the hill, they were on the crest. The job was done.

The forward tanks vanished into a thick pat of smoke beyond the hill. The cackle of small arms fire grew less. We went to find the tank captain.

He was jubilant—"boy, this thing works beautifully, just exactly the way we sent it out." At this instant, his observer hurried up, brandishing his field glasses in a queer sawing gesture. "Two of our tanks are burning, captain, and one is hit. I saw the men jump out," he said, in a queer harsh voice. And so ended the fight at Yongsan, that was meant to prepare the way for something far bigger, yet to come.

NLRB vs. Denham

By Marquis Childs

Battle Of Washington

WHILE THE war in Korea goes on and on, there is a little private war here in Washington that for the most part escapes headline attention. It is between the members of the National Labor Relations Board and the board's general counsel, the highly articulate and temperamental Robert N. Denham.

Labor Day may be a good occasion to consider the latest maneuvers on this particular Washington front. Of course, as compared to some of the more violent heaving and pulling at the top of the heap, this may be considered merely as a kind of Balkan war. But it is nevertheless significant of the fratricidal atmosphere of this Capital.

Under the Taft-Hartley law, which is finding fewer and fewer champions these days, NLRB's general counsel was given a semi-independent status. Under the law he is appointed by the President as are the members of the board.

This, as the framers of the law should have understood, was almost an open invitation to the Washington pastime of bureaucratic rivalry. That rivalry within the labor board has gone to extraordinary lengths.

ONE SKIRMISH centered on Denham's right to name personnel to the field offices without consulting the board. Thus Denham put a Denham-approved employe in charge of the Memphis office. There was apparently nothing wrong with this appointment but the board didn't like it because it had not been consulted. Its answer was to "amend" the delegation of authority made to Denham. Flags were raised on all public buildings to signal this victory for the board.

But the major engagement has gone on around something called the Vulcan Forging case. The board ordered enforcement of the law against the company and in the course of legal proceedings instructed Denham to file a brief in the Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati.

The brief as drawn by Denham was not to the board's satisfaction. He was asked to withhold it until it could be revised and additional arguments put in. Denham filed it anyway.

Thereupon the board repudiated the brief and ordered its own solicitor, Miss Ida Klaus, to file the board's brief. This brought an immediate challenge from Denham who declared that Miss Klaus had only been loaned to the board, courtesy of Denham, and that neither she nor anyone else, except Denham, had the authority to write the board's briefs.

That is about where the battle stands today. Presumably Vulcan is still forging. At least we can hope so since Vulcan's forgings are important for that other and larger war 7000 miles away.

HOW LONG this little Balkan campaign will go on is anyone's guess. President Truman could end it at any point by firing Denham.

By so doing he might stir a protest since Denham has made himself something of a hero to some elements of business and even to some union interests that have received a sort of favored nation treatment. There is less likelihood of this today, however, than there was a few months ago.

Denham has come under sharp criticism from conservative sources for some of his actions considered to be pretty high-handed. Senator Irving M. Ives of New York, a Republican, recently put in the Congressional Record editorials from the Wall Street Journal and the Journal of Commerce. These editorials accused Denham of permitting what is in effect union-shop conditions in the building trades without the formality of a supervised election as provided under the Taft-Hartley law. The present relationship, as the Wall Street Journal pointed out, leaves the board without even a seeing-eye dog to lead it into court.

Recently President Truman prevailed on Paul Herzog to accept a second five-year term as chairman of the NLRB. Herzog was quickly confirmed by the Senate, which seems to show that there is no quarrel with his policies. If the board is to be an effective instrument for labor peace, there can be no room for the kind of trench warfare that has been going on.

State Pacts for Cooperation In Disaster to Be Stressed

Interstate compacts for mutual disaster relief will be urged by Washington as part of a growing program to help States meet defense problems.

State "defense" maps are now being prepared by the National Securities Resources Board together with explanatory data and suggestions for overcoming difficulties stemming from State sovereignty and conflicting State laws.

The maps will make it clear to State Governors and their staffs not only which cities and other areas are considered "critical" as targets but will stress the necessity for arriving at some sort of interstate compacts for mutual disaster relief.

As it now stands, officials pointed out, a vulnerable area in one State may be far from police, fire and medical help from the State in question but very near such help from another. In case of disaster, emergency relief would have to come from the neighboring State, which presents serious complications.

For instance, a target in Maryland near the Pennsyvania line or in Virginia near the North Carolina line might be bombed or sabotaged. In that case, help which could come most quickly from the adjoining State might run afoul of State laws. It might not be possible, without advance understanding and possible interstate compacts, for fire and police departments to cross State lines.

Doctors in Pennsylvania or North Carolina technically would be practising without proper licenses in Maryland or Virginia. Firemen's and policemen's insurance and compensation might not be valid if they crossed into another State.

When the maps and explanatory data are delivered to the Governors, which is expected early this month, the stage will be set for the interstate cooperation which authories here feel will be necessary to avoid these complications.

The Federal Government itself, it was pointed out, can do little more than suggest and advise; positive action toward cooperation must be taken by the States themselves.

It was understood the NSRB has been working on defense information for some time and recently was questioned about progress by Senator Brien MacMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee. McMahon, assured that the work was near completion, described some of it in a letter to Governor Chester Bowles of Connecticut, which he made public.

McMahon pointed out in his letter to Bowles that maps will not differentiate between the possible importance of one target area over another. As far as Connecticut was concerned, he advised that mayors and civilian defense directors meet as soon as possible after the maps are delivered to make plans for cooperation within the State itself.

He said the maps would be classified "restricted," and should not be made available for publication.

17 in House Urge Dewey To Run Again

Seventeen New York Republican House members yesterday urged Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York to accept renomination.

The New York State Republican Convention, which opens Tuesday, is scheduled to name a candidate. Dewey announced in June he would not run again.

The New Yorkers issued a statement saying "we agree with Lieutenant Governor Joe R. Hanley" Dewey should accept renomination, "particularly in these times when his proven wisdom, administrative talents, and thorough experience are so vital to our stability and security."

It added:

"We join Mr. Hanley in urging Governor Dewey to accept renomination because his grasp of international affairs, his record for foresight, and his experience as an executive in time of war are needed today more than ever before.

"He has consistently and correctly evaluated the necessity for a strong anti-Communist foreign policy in Asia as well as Europe.

"As long ago as 1947, he warned his country that if the American occupation troops were withdrawn from South Korea an invasion from the north would result."

The statement bore the names of Representatives Reed, Taber, Wadsworth, Cole, Gamble, Leonard W. Hall, Kilburn, Kearney, Lefevre, Taylor, Gwinn, Coudert, Javits, Riehlman, Pfeiffer, Keating and Mrs. Katharine St. George.

GOP Confident Dewey Will Accept Nomination

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (NYHT).—Confident Governor Dewey will accept renomination—and heartened, for the most part at the prospect—Republicans leaders today began to discuss the rest of the ticket to be nominated at the party's convention at Saratoga Springs.

The Governor's acceptance was foreshadowed Friday when Lieuenant Governor Hanley, organization choice after Dewey withdrew as a candidate, made public a letter urging Dewey to run. The Governor's answer is expected Monday or Tuseday. MBost informed Republicans had little doubt the answer would be yes.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 3 (AP).—Fifty-four gorgeous girls begin a cloistered week today, each with her eye on the Nation's most coveted beauty title — Miss America.

The girls — representing 46 States, four cities, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico—have a tough week's schedule.

The first preliminary is scheduled for Wednesday night. All day Wednesday, the girls will rehearse for the preliminary. A third of the girls will appear in bathing suits, a third in evening gowns and a third in the talent division. By Friday night, each girl will have competed in the three sections. Fifteen will be selected as finalists Saturday night and judges will choose one as Miss America by midnight.

A panel of judges that includes educators, artists, musicians, and theatrical experts makes the decision. For the winner there is a $5000 scholarship, a new automobile, several modelling and acting contracts, and an opportunity to earn something like $50,000 in the next year. For 14 runners-up there is a jackpot of $20,000 in scholarships to be shared, plus contracts from model agencies or theatrical concerns.

Mahoney Threatens Expose Of 'Shocking' Lane Conduct

BALTIMORE, Sept., 3 (AP).—George P. Mahoney said today he may "have no alternative but to reveal some of the shocking incidents concerning Mr. Lane that have been brought to my attention during my travels throughout the State."

Mahoney and Governor W. Preston Lane are rivals for the Democratic nomination for governor in the primary election.

Mahoney said today that "Mr. Lane has been very busy with his highly paid State staff searching my private life from my boyhood on."

"I do not have time to waste looking into Mr. Lane's personal life," he continued. "There are many more important matters that I feel the people of the State are entitled to know about Mr. Lane's administrative record.

"However, if Mr. Lane continues to waste taxpayers time with personal attacks on me, I will have no alternative."

Mahoney said that throughout the campaign he had confined himself to facts and figures, but that Lane had not.

"A candidate in a political contest should be judged on his record," Mahoney said. "I have made no personal attacks on Mr. Lane. I have not invaded his personal life or alluded to his personality defects. I have not wasted time in this sort of Nazi smear tactic. I have been too busy pointing out to the voters of our State the course they must follow to escape the scourge of mounting taxation and debt."

Mahoney, a Baltimore paving contractor and former chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, last month said Lane "is not fit to hold office."

Lane's campaign manager replied by calling Mahoney a "gossip-mongering old fishwife" and referring to Mahoney's arrest on a disorderly conduct charge 27 years ago.

Lane Asks Mahoney To List Economy Plans

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP).—Governor Lane asked George P. Mahoney today to "stop waving those vague millions about" and say how he would cut State expenditures.

Lane said that Mahoney hasn't said how he would cut millions from the State budget because "he wouldn't dare do it."

"It cannot be done." the Governor said, "unless the people of this State want the school system to collapse into a shambles, the road system to go to pot, and our hospitals to deteriorate into pesthouses."

The Governor said Mahoney "refuses to give the public a single specific idea where these 'millions and millions' are going to be found."

Prince Georges GOP Club Indorses Gen. Markey

Gen. D. John Markey has been indorsed as a candidate for the United States Senate from Maryland by the Republican Club of Prince Georges County.

Gordon Louk, club president, yesterday announced the indorsement and said Markey is "the one man in Maryland most needed at this critical period in the United States Senate to help straighten out the intolerable situation created by Senator (Millard F.) Tydings.

Markey is to speak Thursday at 8 p. m. at Odd Fellows Hall, Capitol Heights, Md.

Greek Lovers Separated By Warrant

ATHENS, Sept. 3 (AP). — The storybook lovers of Crete were separated today by a government move which may lead to renewal of a bloody mountain feud on that Mediterranean island.

Athens police took Constantine Kephaloyannis, the dashing island Romeo, into custody on a warrant sworn out by Crete's public prosecutor charging him with kidnaping Tassoula Petracogeorgi.

The couple were married Friday in a remote Cretan monastery atop fabled Mount Ida 11 days after Constantine made off with 20-year-old sultry-eyed Tassoula.

The impetuous, mustachioed lover said bad blood which has existed for generations between the Kephaloyannis and Petracogeorgis made a normal courtship impossible.

After the marriage the two young lovers flew to Athens to ask the blessing of Archbishop Spyridon of the Greek Orthodox Church. It was reported early today that he had blessed the union. Later this was denied, but it is understood that the archbishop considered the marriage legal.

Tassoula was released from clerical chaperonage and rejoined her husband. She was with him when police picked him up on the kidnaping warrant this morning.

"I love Costa and married him of my free will," the girl told newsmen yesterday.

Ewing Lists U. S., Soviet Labor Yields

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Communist propaganda would lose its force if the world realized a Russian must work 43 hours and 6 minutes to buy his wife a simple cotton dress an American could get with 2 hours' and 14 minutes' labor, Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing said today.

The truth about the Russian "workers paradise" is a greater weapon against communism than the tank, the heavy bomber or atom bomb, Ewing told an Inter-Faith rally in tribute to the Histadrut, Israel's labor federation.

"What is it really like to live in the worker's paradise," Ewing asked. . . . "As of May this year (the Soviet worker) put in one hour and 48 minutes of labor to pay for one pound of granulated sugar. An American worker can earn that much sugar in four minutes and a few seconds.

"Our Soviet worker puts in 3 hours and 5 minutes of labor to pay for one pound of dressed chicken. An American worker takes 18 minutes. In the worker's paradise, he would put in 43 hours and 6 minutes to buy his wife a simple cotton dress; in America it would take 2 hours and 14 minutes."

Rents are low in the Soviet Union, Ewing said, but the average Russian would give up his low-rent dwelling to move into the slums being cleared in the United States. He said the average Russian city family has living quarters of only 6 feet by 6 feet per person.

Parents See Plebes' Life At Academy

The fathoms-deep mysteries of life at the United States Naval Academy were revealed last weekend as Navy brass played host to 900 curious parents of the plebes.

Parents poked into living quarters, ate Navy mess, watched drill, and topped it off by telling the brass what they thought of the whole thing at a "Parents Forum" Saturday night.

Open house for the parents of the class of 1954 was designed "to sponsor a feeling of mutual understanding between parents of the Midshipmen of the brigade and the officers and faculty of the Naval Academy," said Vice Admiral Harry W. Hill, superintendent of the Academy.

Highlight of the program was the forum during which members of the Academy staff told parents the responsibilities, aims and details of Academy life.

One question fired at the entire academic board was, "What types of commissions are available to graduates of the Academy?"

Officials explained graduates could receive regular line commissions, or commissions in the Supply Corps, Civil Engineer Corps, Marine Corps or United States Air Force.

Another parent asked why Middies aren't allowed to ride in autos in Annapolis. The answer was they can walk anywhere within the 5-mile limits of the base. Autos tempt the future officers to go off limits.

Daniel A. Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, welcomed the guests Saturday and saw a parade which numbered 1080 members of the plebe class.

5 Nations to Export 10% Less Coffee in Year

The five Latin-American nations that supply most of this country's coffee will have about 10 percent less for export this year but domestic shortages are unlikely, Agriculture Department experts said yesterday.

One official said, however, that the "supply-demand situation will continue tight" because of a decline in production and the worldwide popularity of coffee. The Department estimated there will be about 30,600,000 bags of coffee for export this year from Brazil, Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala and Mexico. This compares with 33,700,000 bags last year.

Arson Is Suspected In $500,000 Blazes

DODGE CITY, Kans., Sept. 3 (AP).—Four fires, believed to be the work of an arsonist, broke out at about the same time early today and caused damages estimated by Fire Chief M. C. Woodall at $500,000.

Woodall and Police Chief Peal Manda said "arson is suspected." They pointed out that wads of shredded oil-soaked paper was found in two of the places burned and in two other establishments in the business district.

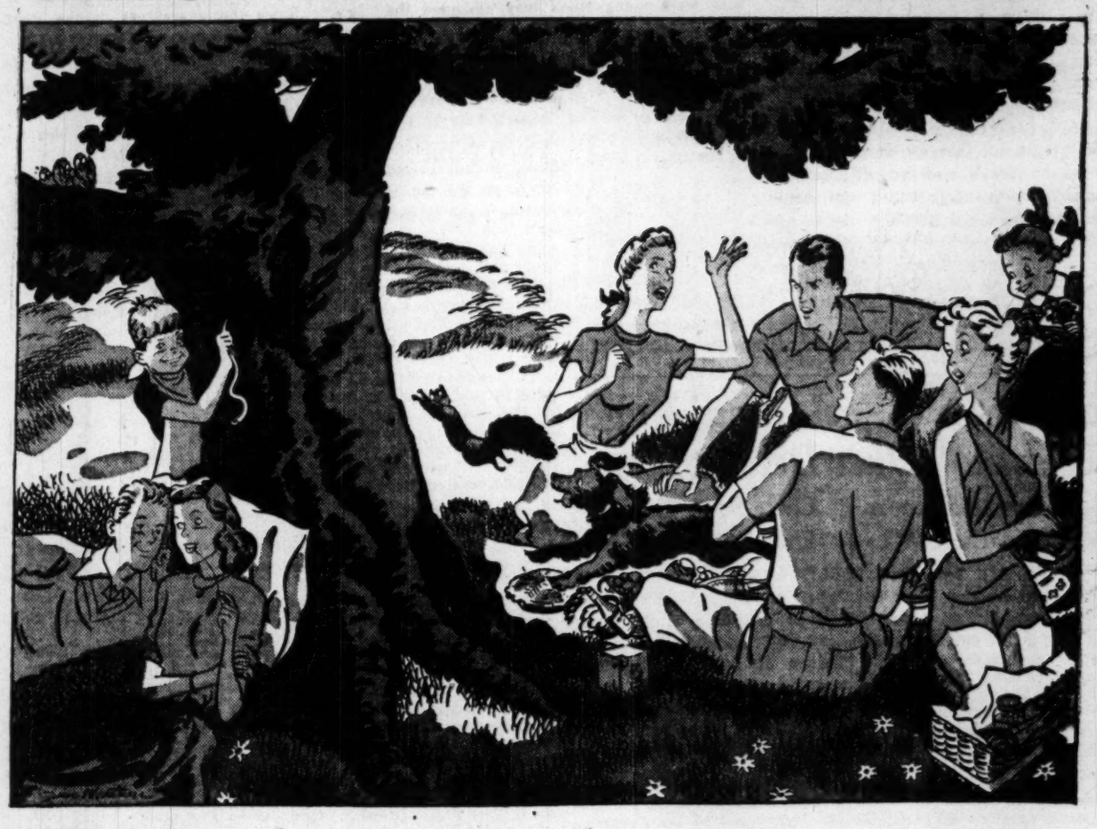
LABOR DAY 'RIOT' IN AMERICA



Some 60 million strong, we bread-earners are taking a holiday—celebrating our rights as free American workers; and, unless an over-excited fan beans the umpire with a pop bottle, our only riots will be of food and fun.

But rights beget duties—our continued safety as free workers depends on our willingness to put in 365 days a year at being good citizens. That's a whole-time job—our freedom, our security, our very lives depend on it!

Probably most of us think that we are already pretty good citizens—but let's take a look at the record.

The right to vote is fundamental to freedom. Yet in the last presidential election 45 million did not take the trouble to go to the polls. Almost half of us didn't value freedom enough to walk a block or two and cast our ballots.

Let's look ourselves over some more. It took thousands of years and a lot of wars to set up our right to trial by jury. Yet, too many regard dodging jury service as a very smart thing to do. Those same duty dodgers yell their heads off when they think some injustice is done in our courts.

Then there are folks who can't spare the time to attend P.T.A. meetings. Others who think their sole duty as Union members is to pay dues—let some one else attend the meetings. There are stockholders who draw dividends, but don't vote.

Let's remember this! We'll hold on to our right to celebrate Labor Day only as long as we hold on to freedom. And that's a full-time job—it takes 150 million good citizens working 365 days a year to do it right.

EVERY HOME should have this guide to the Rights and Duties of an American.

Tigers Cut Yank Lead to 2 Games, Beat Chisox, 4-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The Yankees are now defining the old question: How lucky can you get? Their Exhibit A is large, red-faced Johnny Mize, whose florid countenance is in nowise due to any embarrassment in the hitting department.

The Yankees are now winging out in front, and not the least of the reasons has been the slugging of Mister Mize who recently whacked his fifth homer in five consecutive games. In Mize's case, the Yankees have been blessed.

Povich

Fact is, they didn't want the guy around this season. He had a bad shoulder, couldn't throw, and they sent him back to Kansas City. When they brought him back in mid-July, he was still in foul shape, and the Yankee management suggested that Mize go back to the minors.

Then it was that Mize squawked. He had waived his rights as a 10-year man to choose his own club if he was going back to the minors that first time. But when the Yanks tried to send him out again, to Oakland, Big Jawn kicked up a bit of a fuss with General Manager George Weiss.

MIZE COULD demand his free agency if the Yankees didn't want him, and he told Weiss "I'll let you know about Oakland after I make a few calls I have in mind." Inquiring whom Mize intended to call, Weiss was told "Red Rolfe, because I think the Tigers could use me."

At that, Weiss recoiled. The one club he didn't want Mize to join was Detroit, then leading the Yanks. He told Mize "On second thought, you better stick around with the Yankees. We'll keep you on the payroll.

Mize stuck around and caught fire. He solved both the Yankees' first base problem and fired up their sagging hitting attack. His shoulder came around miraculously. Manager Casey Stengel was saying today "If I was a praying man I'd drop to my knees and thank the good Lord Johnny didn't wind up with Detroit."

The guy the Yankees twice tried to get rid of is now swinging their hottest bat, and is one of the reasons Stengel's team is now threatening to take it all.

THERE NEVER was any question of Mize's hitting. Stengel was wondering out loud whether there is a better hitter in the league despite the fact that Mize isn't batting .300. "Nobody battles the pitcher as well as Mize," said Stengel.

"Nobody makes the pitcher come in with the good pitch as consistently as Johnny," Stengel added. "He doesn't go for that ball that is only an inch or two away from the plate. He just stands there and spits at 'em. Only the great hitters have an eye like that."

He was analyzing Mize's batting stroke, too. "Watch him. His bat doesn't travel as far as anybody's else's. He just cocks it and slaps, and when you're as big as he is, you can slap a ball into the seats. That short swing is wonderful, and it's natural with Johnny. Less margin for error when you swing like he does."

"And the way he guards that dish with two strikes against him. He just stands there nice and free and looks down the pitchers throat."

MIZE WAS PRETTY useless when he reported to the Yankees last spring in Florida. The shoulder he hurt in Chicago diving into the bag to make a play hadn't come around.

"The doctors told me to rest it and do nothing, and when I got to training camp I knew it had been a mistake. No life in the arm at all. That won't happen next winter. I'm going to work it every day to keep it feeling as good as it is."

Johnny was saying he had a bum shoulder of the same kind a half dozen years ago when he was with the Cardinals. "I took three treatments from a doctor named Ferguson, and he fixed it up like new. Ferguson knew what it was all about. He used to be a pitcher with the Giants years back.

"I got unlucky, though, when I hurt the shoulder all over again last year. I went back to see Dr. Ferguson again, and the poor guy had dropped dead. What a tough break for me and him."

CHECKERBOARD INSTEAD OF SCOREBOARD—These New York Yankees turned to the checkerboard instead of the scoreboard yesterday in their Yankee Stadium dressing room while waiting to find out if their doubleheader with the Nats would be played. The rains kept up and the games were postponed. Playing and kibitzing left to right are Johnny Mize, Yogi Berra, Ed Lopat (pondering a move), Tommy Byrne and Tom Henrich

Mitchell Bats in 4, Hits Homer in Tribe's 8-1 Victory

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3 (AP).—With Dale Mitchell batting in four runs—three of them on a homer—the Cleveland Indians walloped the St. Louis Browns 8 to 1 today to sweep the two-game series between the two clubs. Bob Feller hurled the victory, giving up five hits.

Mitchell's home run came in the second after a single by Bob Kennedy and walk to Jim Hegan. In the fourth the Indians knocked starter Don Johnson out of the box with a triple by Feller and singles by Mitchell and Avila. Luke Easter doubled off reliefer Clarence Marshall, scoring the two runners; then Easter crossed the plate on Ike Boone's single.

Cleveland added another tally in the sixth on Larry Doby's home run.

The Browns' lone run followed an error in the fifth by Boone which put Roy Sievers on base. He took second when Billy DeMars grounded out, and scored on Pinch-hitter Hank Arft's single.

In addition to his homer and single, Mitchell had a double to open the contest. Mitchell took third on a long fly but he was out at the plate when Doby hit to the infield. An argument on the play livened things up, with Coach Al Simmons getting thumbed out by Umpire Eddie Rommel.

Eddie Robinson's 17th Homer in 9th Spoils Shutout

DETROIT, Sept. 3 (AP).—Right-hander Freddie Hutchinson pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox today as the Tigers picked up half a game on the idle New York Yankees.

The second-place Detroiters thus climbed to within two games of the American League leading Yankees.

Hutchinson had a five-hit shutout going into the ninth as he notched his fifteenth win and his third over the White Sox.

But Floyd Baker's single followed by Eddie Robinson's seventeenth homer drove both runs across and enabled the White Sox to escape a whitewashing.

The Tigers bunched all their scoring in the third inning as they swept the two-game series. Four hits and a walk figured in the four-run flurry before a small Sunday crowd of 25,589.

Nats Tackle Bosox Today In Twin Bill

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Red Sox, a desperation team at this stage of the pennant race, move into Griffith Stadium for a doubleheader with the Nats today.

The Yankees gained no ground at the expense of the Nats yesterday when rain washed out the doubleheader scheduled at Yankee Stadium. But, as the Nats entrained for Washington, Manager Casey Stengel sounded a note of warning to the Red Sox.

"Anytime you beat Washington these days, you ought to feel happy about it," said Stengel. "They give every club a rugged battle and the Red Sox should take nothing for granted against Washington."

Hudson Goes

Manager Bucky Harris, who has made it a practice to muster his top pitching against every pennant contender at this stage of the race, will send Sid Hudson and Bob Kuzava at the Boston club in today's twin bill.

The Red Sox are laboring three games in the ruck of the Yankees in third place at this point, despite winning 17 of their last 19. The Yankees, meanwhile, have won 15 of their last 17. A defeat in any game might prove costly to the Sox, Manager Steve O'Neill knows.

Joe Dobson, traditionally tough for the Nats, will probably go against Hudson in the first game. Facing a shortage of pitchers as usual, O'Neill will rely on Rookie Willard Nixon, up from Louisville.

Six .300 Hitters

In the Red Sox, the Nats will be facing the hottest hitting team in the league which has not been affected in the least by the absence of Ted Williams. Six of the Red Sox regulars are hitting more than .300.

Harris is hopeful that Sam Mele, limping on a lame leg last week, will be ready to play at least one of today's games. Mickey Vernon is recovering rapidly from his sprained foot and probably will play both games.

The Nats and Yankees suffered no great financial loss from the rain in New York yesterday. Only a few thousand people were in the park when the game was called. The two clubs agreed to make up the games in a doubleheader September 22, an open date on the schedule.

Cameo Vs. Snug Harbor

The Cameo Whiz Kids, composed mostly of local high school baseball players, will play Snug Harbor, Prince Georges County champion, at Snug Harbor's diamond today at 3 p. m.

Now Maybe He'll Drive With the Putter

Haas Makes Putter Out Of Driver and Posts 34

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP).—Lanky Fred Haas, Jr., of Claremont, Calif., was plagued by a balky putter yesterday in the first round of the $15,000 Empire State Open golf tournament. So he used a driver on the greens.

With the putter, Haas three-putted three holes for an outgoing 38, two over par.

He claimed the club was shafted faulty and asked to replace it before going on the tenth. The request was turned down. Haas swung the putter on the clubhouse floor. It broke.

He still was refused the use of another putter.

So, Haas started the second nine without a putter. He tried a No. 4 iron on the tenth green, and then switched to the driver the rest of the way.

The result: A 12-footer for a birdie on the eleventh; a 10-footer for par on the twelfth; a 15-footer for a birdie on the fifteenth and a 10-footer for a birdie on the sixteenth.

He carded a 34 for the second nine.

Ralph Runs Total to 42, 28 Games Left

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 3 (AP).—Rookie Gus Bell doubled Ralph Kiner home with the winning run in the last of the tenth inning today as the Pittsburgh Pirates outlasted the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-11, in a see-saw battle that featured eight home runs, two by Kiner.

The Pirates trailed 11-9 going into the tenth, but successive homers by Pete Castiglione and Bob Dillinger knotted the count. Kiner, who hit his forty-first and forty-second home runs of the season, was intentionally passed, paving the way for Bell's game-winning smash.

Kiner has 28 more games left in which to equal or better his record of last year when he hit 54 home runs to lead both leagues. He needs 18 more to equal Babe Ruth's record of 60 in one season.

Danny O'Connell also homered for the Pirates and Tommy Glaviano, Stan Musial and Bill Howerton each belted one for the Cards.

Musial's homer, his twenty-first, put the Cardinals in tre lead by a run in the eighth. But Kiner belted out his forty-second of the year with one aboard in the Pirate half of the inning to push the Pirates ahead again.

Hapless Colts Feel Rams' Rage; Eagles Roll Over Detroit Lions

L. A. Runs Baltimore Out of Park, 70-21

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 3 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams and Coach Joe Stydahar all felt much better today. In fact, they were downright exuberant.

Coach Joe told the boys last night before they played the Baltimore Colts in a National Football League exhibition that there were going to be some changes made if they didn't show him something. That something had to be a neat victory over the Colts.

Stydahar shook up the team. He had eight new starters. He said: "Now if you guys don't do something there'll not only be another shake-up but quite a few of you will be leaving us."

So, what those fellows did to the Colts was well worth writing home about. They beat Baltimore, 70-21. They made 11 touchdowns—one more than they scored in their entire season in the league. They romped for 614 yards, 345 of it on the ground. Bob Waterfield engineered them to six touchdowns, passing for two. He whipped the ball 212 yards. Norman Van Brocklin quarterbacked the team for its other TD's.

The Ram scoring included a 64-yard punt return for a touchdown by Dan Towler, a 45-yard pass from Waterfield to Tommy Kaliminir and an 85-yard dash by Jerry Williams with a hand-off.

Curtis Cup Play Begins

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Mark A. Porter, the National women's champion from Westmont, N. J., and Beverly Hanson, the long-hitting blonde from Fargo, N. D., were named today on the No. 1 foursome for the opening tomorrow of the Curtis Cup golf matches with the British Isles team.

They will oppose the two Scotswomen of the British team, Mrs. George Valentine of Perthshire, runner-up in this year's British women's championship, and Jean Donald of North Berwick, runner-up for the British title two years ago.

The Americans have become overwhelming favorites to retain the trophy they never have lost.

The event consists of three foursomes tomorrow and six singles Tuesday, each worth one point. All matches will end on the thirty-sixth, a tie giving each team a half point.

Other pairings for tomorrow, announced by British Captain Mrs. A. C. Critchley and the United States team's nonplaying captain, Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare of Philadelphia.

Frances "Bunty" Stephens, the 1949 British titlist from Liverpool, and Elizabeth Price of Farnham, England, for the british Isles vs. Helen Sigel of Philadelphia and Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, for the United States.

Philomena Garvey, the four-time champion of Erie from Dublin, and Jeanne Bisgood, the Bournemouth barrister, for the British, vs. Dorothy Kielty of Los Angeles and Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta for the United States.

Says Coach Ball

Dudley a 'Specialist' In Every Department

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

KANSAS CITY, MO., Sept. 3.—If the Detroit Lions have any more "tired out, beat up" football players of the Bill Dudley type they're planning to convert into coaches, they should send them, C.O.D. to the Washington Redskins immediately. The Redskins welcome them with open arms.

Dudley has been with the Redskins for only two months, but he's made such a great impression already his coaches are wondering how in the dickens the Redskins ever got along without him.

Bill Dudley

Saddled with the terrific salaries of Doak Walker, Bobby Layne and Leon Hart, the Lions were ready to take the 28-year-old Dudley off the active list and make him a backfield coach. They reckoned he would not only make them a crackerjack coach, but they wouldn't have to pay him $20,000 a year as they had been doing for three seasons.

Dudley protested and asked to be traded. A deal with the Redskins sending Dan Sandifer to the Lions for Dudley was finally cooked up, contingent on Dudley taking a huge salary cut to join the Redskins. He agreed and today neither he nor the Redskins regret the move.

"IF DUDLEY is through as a player, I want more washed up players," Remarked Head Coach Herman Ball today as the Redskins worked out for Thursday's exhibition with the New York Yankees.

"Bill Dudley is a specialist—he specializes in the game of football, not just one department, but in every department," Ball added.

The Redskins call Dudley their "20-point-man." They say he'll score at least seven points each game and take 14 points away from the opposition with his keen defensive play.

In the four exhibition games the unbeaten Redskins have won, Dudley has:

1. Scored two touchdowns.
2. Kicked three field goals.
3. Kicked the points after all 14 Redskins touchdowns.
4. Averaged 42.9 yards punting.
5. Done all of the kicking off.
6. Caught four passes from Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer, one for a touchdown and another to place the ball on the 2-yard line to set up a score.
7. Intercepted four passes.
8. Made more tackles than any other halfback.

"If he could only run the business office, we'd have a valuable piece of football property on our hands," chuckled Ball.

DUDLEY'S GREATEST admirer is Rookie Halfback Hall Haynes, of Santa Clara, who has blossomed out as one of the Redskins' top pass defense players.

"This Dudley is uncanny," Haynes remarked. "He can diagnose players better than any man I've ever known in football. Against the Cardinals in Denver, I was having trouble keeping up with Mal Kutner. Bill noticed it, called time out and told me to watch for Kutner cutting to his right when he came down for a pass. I played Kutner the way Dudley suggested and Kutner didn't catch any more passes against me. Bill's a coach on the field."

Now in his seventh season of pro ball, the 175-pound former All-American halfback at the University of Virginia has won practically every honor a football player can achieve.

He's twice been voted the most valuable player in the National Football League.

He's also been named the most valuable college player and the most valuable service football player.

"AND I GOT a new honor for him," added Guard Johnny Steber. "As far as I'm concerned, he's the most valuable bridge player in the league. He saves me plenty when I'm his partner."

Left Halfback Dudley is the chief reason the Redskins have a running attack this season. In the past five or six years, Baugh has been timid about entrusting his left halfback with the ball for running purposes because Dudley's predecessors either (a) couldn't run or (b) fumbled. Dudley fits into neither of those categories.

"If they'd let us play with two footballs," remarked Sammy Baugh, "nobody would beat us. Bill could run with one and I'd be a throwing him the other one."

Teen-Agers Run 1-2-3 at Warrenton

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

WARRENTON, Va., Sept. 3—The Olympic tryouts, feature event of the three-day Warrenton horse show resulted in three-teenagers earning the top spots.

Sixteen-year-old Dwight W. Winkleman jr. from Southern Pines, N. C., won the unanimous vote of the judges over 16*-year-old Myrna Felvey of Richmond, Va.

Winkleman, a third-year student at Culver Military Academy rode Mrs. George Greenhaigh's Moonlgiht Bay the most important triumph of the show from an international standpoint.

Myrna Felvey, one of the Nation's best young riders, was placed second with Jane Pohl Rust of Leesburg, Va., riding her versatile Fitzrada to third.

Fifteen-year-old Jimmy Hatcher, the only green performer in the class, his own Candlewick, took fourth place after displaying fine horsemanship when his 3-year-old mount slipped in the fetlock-deep mud between fences and went down to her girth.

Fourteen-year-old Kenny Darling from Richmond, Va., rode her Reno Rose to victory in the conformation hunter Corinthian class, the only horse to win the $35,000 John Barton Payne Perpetual Trophy twice. Reno Rose won the same event last year for Greenhill Farms of Tulsa, Okla., along with the coveted conformation hunter championship and leads this year by one half point for the same honors.

The final sessions of the show will be held Monday at 10 a. m. (EST) and 2 p. m. with the championship awards of national renown climaxing the record-breaking finale of the $18,000 Virginia Horse Show circuit.

Pros Fazio, Griesmer Win Dream Match, 3-2

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

A dream match involving the top area golfers headed yesterday's links parade.

The two top amateurs, District Champ Bobby Brownell and Middle Atlantic King Ralph Bogart, tangled with Pros George Fazio of Woodmont and Harry Griesmer of Bethesda in an exhibition match at Bethesda Country Club and the pros won, 3 and 2.

The match was open to the public and a gallery of more than 500 watched some brilliant golf. Fazio and Griesmer both birdied the second to go one up. Three and four were halved, and then Fazio came up with three straight birdies on five, six, and seven. Bogart, Brownell, and Griesmer also got birds on the par 5, 560-yard fifth.

Three down at the turn, Bogart and Brownell both birdied ten, on which the pros took pars, to cut the margin to two. But the amateurs three-putted 12 to go three down again. The pros halved the next four holes and closed out the match on sixteen.

Before the match, tournament pro Fazio amused the crowd with impersonations of Bing Crosby, and Jim Ferrier. Fazio had the best medal score of the day, 33, 35—68, 2 below par. Griesmer's 34, 35—69 was second low. Bogart and Brownell had identical 36, 35—71s.

In the finals of the Bethesda Club's women's championship tournament, Connie Attwood defeated Mrs. Peggy Atwood, 2 and 1, for the championship.

CONGRESSIONAL: Fleming Bomar's 75—74—149 leads qualifiers for the club championship tournament. George Cornell is second with 73—77—150, Dr. W. D. Willey third with 73—78—151, and W. H. Wenzelfourthwith 77—75—152. Match play begins next Sunday.

WASHINGTON: Claude Rippy's four-below-par 66 was one of the best rounds shot this year.

In the Pro-Lady tournament, D. E. Ball and Elizabeth Poeppel, 29-31—60, tied D. E. Ball and Mrs. Al Brown, 30-30—60, for first. Claude Rippy and Mrs. D. L. Monsees, 31-34—65, were third and Rippy and Mrs. Louis Miles, 32-34—66, were fourth.

FAIRFAX COURTHOUSE

Mrs. Charles Stickel and Floyd Wood won the mixed Scotch foursome with a net 36. Mrs. George Mehler and John Sadtler were second with a net 40. George Mehler, 96-20—76, won the 18-hole sweepstakes. Charles Lawrence and J. W. Rust tied for second with net 77s.

MANOR: H. E. Deel beat L. D. Ritter, 3 and 2, and Defending Champ Ted Burrows won over J. R. Miller, 4 and 3, in semi-finals matches in the club championship tournament. Deel and Burrows meet in the finals today.

INDIAN SPRING: Gene Schaup, Abe Alley, Sid Simon Walt Diener and Mel Berkowitz won the blind bogey with net 71s.

Yank POW Well Treated, He Reports

NEAR MASAN, Korea, Sept. 3 (AP).—A 23-year-old West Pointer escaped today after two days in the hands of North Koreans. He said the Reds, contrary to propaganda claims, treat American Negro prisoners "with contempt."

Second Lieut. Billy J. Rountree, of Victoria, Tex., a white officer who commanded a Negro infantry platoon, said that while the Red Koreans treated him as an equal, they would not even let the Negroes talk to each other.

"When they started to, the Reds would make them shut up. They were not brutal toward them—they just treated them with contempt," he said.

Twice the North Koreans made him and several Negro prisoners accompany them on attacks. Once an American bullet grazed his chin.

His is one of the best accounts yet of how North Koreans fight.

"They were confident of victory and said they held all American soldiers in contempt," said Rountree.

'Consider You a Friend'

"They had no noncommissioned officers in the group that held us. . . . They would hold a round-table discussion whenever a big decision had to be made. But when it came time to attack they made up in boldness what they lacked in organization."

Roundtree and some of his men were captured when a platoon on his flank retreated. A band of 150 North Koreans grabbed him. They passed him on to a patrol of eight men, three of them wounded.

"One told me, 'I consider you a friend, not a prisoner.' From what I hear, such things rarely happen, but the Reds did not mistreat us. One took my boots and gave me a pair of ballet slippers he was wearing. They did not fit, so another gave me some shoes that did.

"They lived off the food in the fields—corn, peas and squash. They shared their food with us. They were cut off, but they did not threaten to kill us.

"The Communists seemed not to know about the United Nations. They had only heard about the Americans. They kept asking why we were in Korea—they did not know about the background of this war," said the young officer.

'No Medicine for Wounded'

"The eight men who had us were in a tizzy when they found out they were cut off behind our lines. They had no medicine or medical facilities for their wounded. They were just schoolboys, all of them from Seoul. They told me they would send me back there and I could go to school.

Rountree escaped when four unwounded Reds went ahead to look out for American troops. They left the three wounded Reds and one unwounded man to guard him. The single guard was scared and told us to go ahead and join the four scouts. The other four were about 15 yards ahead so I ducked into the bushes with the others and we made it back to the road where Americans rescued us."

Craze for Security Brings a Steel Safe With a Moral Inside

STORY: The chief of a strictly nonsensitive Government bureau gave this story the title: "Security Gone Mad."

He returned recently from a tour of his agency's regional offices. He noticed that several of his offices had bright, shiny new safes that cost about $800 each.

"What's that for?" he asked a regional director, pointing to a safe. "I don't know," the director answered frankly. "Then why did you buy it?" pursued the chief. The director checked with his staff and came up with this answer: "We were instructed to buy it to conform with the department's security regulations."

"Do you use it?" continued the bureau chief. And again the answer: "I dont know." The chief then suggested that the safe be opened for an on-the-spot answer, and it was.

The bureau chief reached in and pulled out the only thing in it—an envelope with the ominous marking: "TOP SECRET." He ripped it open and pulled out a memo and read: "Instructions to Buy Safe to Keep Secret Documents in."

STANDARDS: The Budget Bureau has instructed Federal agencies to use the following guides in preparing estimates for their 1952 budgets:

One employe will be allowed to maintain payroll, leave, and retirement records of every 220 employes. The former standard was 1 for 200;

Each voucher clerk will be expected to handle an average of 3500 vouchers annually instead of the 3200-goal this year;

No more than 1 person for every 103 employes can be placed on personnel work. A rider on the general appropriation bill would lengthen the ratio to 1 for 115 employes;

Autos can't be replaced until they have been operated 60,000 miles or six years, but no more than 25 percent of the cars of any agency can be replaced in a single year, and trucks can't be replaced until they have traveled 50,000 miles or five year;

Only a maximum of 10 percent of the typewriters can be replaced in a single year, and each agency may request up to $8-a-year per employe for a preventive health program.

BIG LABOR: The AFL's National Association of Letter Carriers has broken the 100,000 mark under the vigorous leadership of Bill Doherty. The August 15 report shows a membership of 103,137 paid members, a record for the union. It also shows $318,535 in its fund to build a national headquarters here. The union is conventioning this week in Seattle.

SECRET SERVICE: The 5-day workweek recently ordered for Sercet Service police at the White House will require 23 additional officers for that force. This is one of the last groups of Federal employes to go on a five-day week.

CIVIL SERVICE is taking it on the chin behind the closed doors of congressional committees. For example:

Representative Taber (R., N. Y.) told the House that he had advised Assistant State Secretary Ed Barrett to clean out the "incompetents" in State's Voice of America staff. He then said:

"He (Barrett) advised me that his staff was not as good as he hoped it could be, but that because of Civil Service it was impossible to correct."

Several other officials also are reported to have taken cracks at Civil Service and its lack of leadership in recent weeks.

BOUQUETS: Chairman McKellar of the Senate Appropriations Committee went all-out in praising Evarard Smith and other members of the committee's staff. On the House side, a similar tribute was paid to George Harvey and members of his splendid staff by Representative Rabout (D., Mich.), a member of the House Appropriations Committee. Both staffs have had to work day and night during the long struggle over the budget.

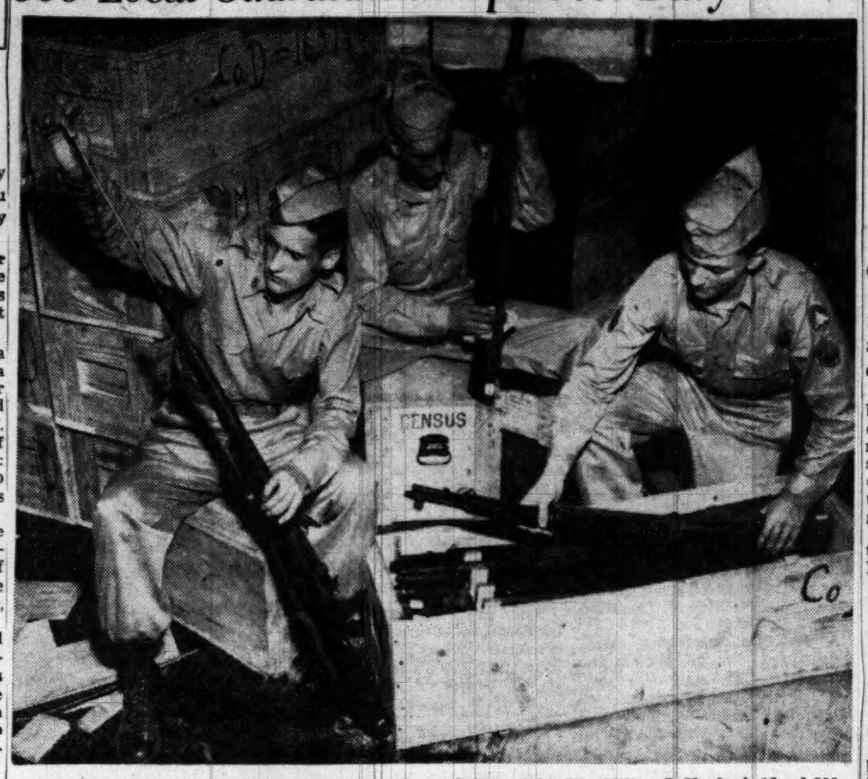
500 Local Guardsmen Report for Duty



IN ACTIVE SERVICE—Members of the 163d Military Police Battalion which reported for active duty yesterday, begin preparations for their transfer Friday to Camp Custer, Mich. Shown cleaning and boxing their rifles are, left to right, Pfc. Milton J. Harford, 18, of 809 Xenia st. se., Pvt. Benjamin R. Merriman, 18, of 473 N st. sw., and Sergt. Robert J. Facey, 20, of 1222 Meigs st. ne., all from Company D

MP Battalion From District Is Federalized

More than 500 local soldiers—members of the 163d Military Police Battalion—moved into the Armory yesterday, setting up a base of operations prior to shipment to Camp Custer, Mich.

The group, the first National Guard MP unit to be called to active duty, was alerted on August 3. Yesterday they were officially "Federalized" and today advance elements leave for the Michigan headquarters.

Activity centered about the moving of equipment, records and weapons to the battalion's trucks. Only about 10 percent of the men will sleep at the Armory, Lieut. Col. George O. Weber, battalion commander, said; the rest will commute from their homes until they move.

Within the mammoth Armory, the four companys and the medical detachment are housed in the offices on three floors of the western end. The dining room, operated by private concession, is on the Armory floor.

Many Are Veterans

About 35 percent of the men are World War II veterans, Capt Donald J. Cook, the battalion adjutant said.

Typical is 37-year-old Staff Sergt. Francis J. Graas of 1046 Barnaby ter. se.

Graas, a Naval Research Laboratory guard, is married and has one child. His reaction to the call to active duty? "It's a job that has to be done."

Yesterday's action was "organized confusion" to the eyes of Sergt. 1c Daniel Davis, 37, the battalion personnel sergeant major. Davis, of 910 Kennedy st. nw., was a machinist in the Naval Gun Factory and was busy hunting-and-pecking out Special Order No. 1 on the typewriter.

But to many others, it was the beginning of a new life. Pvt. John F. Snight, for example, is a 22-year-old FBI fingerprint searcher. Recently married, he said, "My wife is pretty broken up about this, but she'll get over it." He lives at 823 Kentucky ave. se.

Relax in Heat

Along the Armory corridors, there were soldiers dressed in all combinations of fatigues and suntans, uniformly bathed in sweat. Some were playing cards; a few were sipping on cans of beer. Others just fanned themselves.

In the Company A area—three large offices off a dark hall—F./Sergt. Robert M. Mercer, 39, of 1318 Eastern ave. ne., was commenting on the youngsters in his company.

"They're full of ginger," he said. "But we'll take that out of them before long." Mercer is leaving behind a wife and two children.

Sweeping a hall was Sergt. Leonard Lisicki, a member of the medical detachment who used to work in the operating room at Walter Reed Hospital. Lisicki, 30, of 310 16th st. ne., said he was sweeping "because everybody is doing something."

Sergeant Turned Down

The battalion sergeant major, William Hersman dashed into the office of Capt. Cook, the battalion adjutant.

"We've got a dozen typists in there," he said. "Can't we use them to help load trucks, Captain?" Cook, 24, of 725 S. 21st st., Arlington, said "No!"

That's the "first shot of the campaign between the line and office troops of the 163d," he said.

Lieut. Ernest B. Clements, the battalion chaplain, taught Latin, Spanish and religion at Gonzaga High School. Some of his former students are in the outfit, including Corpl. Charles E. Rinaldi, 22, of 4001 New Hampshire ave. nw. Rinaldi was a senior at the University of Maryland and felt he was "going sooner or later and might as well go with friends."

Work Starts Today

The outfit starts active training today. At 0800 hours they attend an orientation lecture; at 0900, close order drill; at 1000, first aid lecture; 1100, interior guard lecture; 1200, lunch; 1300, conduct and authority of the military police; 1400, another lecture on interior guard; 1500, a lecture of military law, and at 1600, the company commanders talk to their men.

The MP outfit was alerted for duty a month ago. "About 90 percent of the men had to read about it in the paper," Chief Warrant Officer F. Lacy Henigst of 4017 Illinois ave. nw. said: 'The word came too late in the evening to get it out to the men.'"

The 163d will be 4 years old October 1. Twenty of the original 45 men who enlisted in the headquarters company are still with the outfit, Captain Cook said.

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

CHOW LINE—Members of the battalion line up for chow in the dining room, operated by private concession, on the first floor of the Armory. The chow line is a familiar procedure for about 35 percent of the men, veterans of World War II

Lifeguard Saves Boy From Banneker Pool

Donald Costley, 13, 1236 1th st. nw., was saved from drowning yesterday in the Banneker Swimming Pool, Georgia ave and Barry st. nw.

Stanley M. Gainor, 20, 743 Park rd. nw., lifeguard, said he pulled the boy ashore after he sank in 11 feet of water. Resuce Squard No. 2 revived the boy, who was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Salesman Held in Slaying of GWU Graduate Won't Talk to Police Until He Gets Lawyer

Lee Edwards, 20-year-old magazine salesman of 4911 14th st. nw., charged with the lonely road slaying of Donald J. Stambaugh, 21, yesterday refused to talk to police until he could consult a lawyer.

Stambaugh, a 1949 graduate of George Washington University, who lived at 409 4th st. nw., was beaten and shot in his car about 4:20 a. m. Saturday. The car was parked on a deserted road, about a half mile from the intersection of Piney Branch rd. and Old Bladensburg rd., in Silver Spring.

Police were directed to the scene by Dr. Leslie W. Ball of 920 Heron dr., Silver Spring. He said he and his wife heard several shots about 4:20 a. m., then a plaintive call of "Help! Help! Police"

Sprawled In Road

Police found Stambaugh sprawled at the side of the road, behind his car. He moaned:

"Oh please give me morphine. You have my permission to give me morphine."

Before he died an hour later at the Washington Sanitarium Stambaugh gasped a description of the killer—"a good looking young man," blond, about 5 feet 8, wearing a leather jacket, khaki pants and a sports shirt.

Stambaugh said he met the assailant in Lafayette Park earlier in the evening.

Police alerted cab companies to look out for a man answering the description given by Stambaugh. Soon a Silver Spring hacker, Jack Bingham, 2017 Lucerne ave., Montgomery Hills, Md., reported picking up such a youth in the 700 block of Flower ave. and driving him to the 4900 block of 14th st. nw.

Checked Address

Police checked the Flower ave. address. There Jean Burroughs, 19, said Edwards arrived about 5 a. m. Edwards, who had dated her several times, said his automobile had run out of gas and asked to use the phone. Jean and her mother, Mrs. Mary Burroughs, said he called for a cab and left when it arrived.

Jean gave police Edwards' 14th st. address. Police arrested him there. In his room police said they found a water-soaked leather jacket, Army pants and sport shirt—clothing resembling the clothing Stambaugh said the assailant wore, also a box containing some .45 caliber shells.

To Compare Bullets

Police said three exploded .45 caliber shells and one unexploded cartridge were found at the scene of the murder. These will be compared with those found in the suspect's room, police said.

Edwards' alibi, police said, was that he visited Miss Burroughs from 1:30 a. m. to 5 a. m. This she denied, insisting he didn't arrive until 5 a. m. After first denying he met Stambaugh in Lafayette Park, and asserting the shells in his room were souvenirs of his Army service, he refused to discuss the case yesterday with police.

Capt. G. W. Linthicum, chief of Montgomery County detectives, said he understood the suspect's father was making arrangements to obtain a lawyer for his son.

Interracial College Plan Draws Mixed School Board Reaction

Adelbert Lee Calls Proposal 'Radical'; Merger Consideration Wednesday Doubtful

A proposal to merge the city's white and Negro teacher colleges yesterday drew mixed reactions from available members of the Board of Education.

The merger was recommended by Dr. Walter E. Hager, president of Wilson Teachers College in a report to Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools. It called for operation of a single teachers college for white and Negro students.

Adelbert W. Lee yesterday called the plan "radical" and accused Dr. Hager of having been "very insubordinate" in advancing the idea publicly "until the board had an opportunity to consider it."

Corning

Dr. James A. Cannon, vice president of the board, said he thought Dr. Hager's idea should be studied very carefully. "I'm not sure we are quite ready for it," he said, "but I think it's coming."

'Logical and . . . Desirable'

Doctor Hager called his proposal the first step in ending segregation in the school system. He said consolidation of Wilson and Miner teachers colleges here would be "logical and eminently desirable," and added board members or officers in the education system "will render distinguished service if they take this statesmanlike step."

Doctor Hager departed from custom to release his report to a number of school officials at the time it was sent to Doctor Corning.

Doctor Corning said yesterday this "seemed to me a very unusual way to proceed. It is the first time to my knowledge that it has been done this way. I think a communication addressed to the superintendent of schools should arrive there before it is given to the public." Doctor Corning refused to make "any comment whatsoever" on the merits of Hager's proposal.

Not on Wednesday Agenda

C. Melvin Sharpe, board president, termed the proposal "purely an administrative matter" and within the purview of Dr. Corning, rather than board members. While declining comment on merits of the plan, he said he doubted whether the report would be discussed at the meeting of the board scheduled Wednesday. He said it was not on the agenda for that session.

Albert E. Steinem, another board member, said he didn't know "whether the policy would be to start at that level (college) or at a lower level." He said the whole matter should be studied as part of an "over-all picture."

Dr. Eugene A. Clark, who as head of Miner Teachers College for Negroes here, is Dr. Hager's "opposite number" in the public school system, termed Hager's proposal a "step in the right direction" and added that it certainly "would be a correct move."

Dr. Clark said the integration of the public school system is "something we must go about gradually, and certainly we should start with teacher education."

Other board members could not be reached for comment on the holiday weekend.

Commercial Age Robs Worker Of Interest, D. C. Pastor Says

"The greatest insult which a commercial age has offered to the worker has been to rob him of all interest in the end product of his work," the Rev. Russell Cartwright Stroup said in a pre-Labor Day sermon yesterday.

The pastor of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 3115 P st. nw., said we have forced the worker "to dedicate his life to making things badly which are not worth making.

"It is the business of the church to recognize that the secular vocation, as such, is sacred. The worker must serve God in his work," Dr. Stroup said.

"The church's approach to the intelligent carpenter is usually confined to exhorting him not to be drunk and disorderly in his leisure time and to come to church on Sunday.

"It may go beyond this and insist that the carpenter who builds homes should himself have a decent home, that he should have honest hours of labor and wages worthy of hire."

"But," the minister said, "beyond all this, his religion should demand that he should make good houses. . . . What use are all the rest, if the very center of his life and occupation is insulting his own manhood by bad carpentry?

"Work is not primarily a thing one does to live, but the thing one lives to do. It is, or should be, the full expression of the worker's faculties, the thing in which he finds spiritual, mental and bodily satisfaction, and the medium in which he offers himself to God."

Dr. Stroup concluded: "Man is made in God's image, and should make things as God makes them, for the sake of doing well a thing that is worth doing."

Dr. Anschutz Gives Sermon on Labor

"On this day before Labor Day, we want to discover and develop the dignity and divinity of labor in capital as well as labor," the Rev. John R. Anschutz said in a sermon yesterday.

The rector of Christ Episcopal Church, 3100 O st. nw., said "There is not one standard for the parson and another for the man in business, one for capital, another for labor. There is but one standard for all.

"Man must labor not because he has sinned, but because he is a child of God whose Son said, 'My Father worketh hitherto and I work into every man his work.'"

Dr. Anschutz concluded, saying:

"The morality of tradesmen, I think, compares favorably with the morality of any profession, but I would utter a plea for the Christianizing of the whole system, of barter and exchange, that our common life may be lifted to a higher level and that in commerce as in all else we may realize, 'One is our Master even Christ and all ye are brethren.'"

The Rev. F. P. Harris Outlines God's Ways

The Rev. F. Paul Harris, pastor of Eldbrooke Methodist Church, River rd. and Wisconsin ave. nw., said in a sermon yesterday that God has three ways in dealing with men.

He mentioned the way of ostracism as with Adam and Eve; the way of annihilation as during the flood; and the way of cooperation as taught by Jesus.

Mr. Harris said, "God is asking us to cooperate with him today, and in doing so, life for each of us will be happier and fuller."

The Rev. C. J. Bartlett Starts New Rectorship

A certificate of suicide was issued in the death by poison yesterday of M/Sergt. Fenton Rogers, 32, a patient at Walter Reed Hospital, who was found about 1 p. m. in a 9th st. hotel room.

Walter Reed authorities said Rogers was undergoing psychiatric treatment and had been granted a weekend pass.

Police said he registered at the Empire Hotel, 415 9th st. nw., about 11:30 p. m. Saturday. A hotel clerk, summoned by a maid who could not open the barred door to his room, found the body in the afternoon.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy, who issued the certificate of suicide, said an empty bottle that had contaned poison was found in the room. A glass near the bed contained traces of the poison, he reported.

Sam Hardy, 71, Capitol Hill Doorman, to End Long Service

After more than 42 years service with the House Ways and Means Committee, Sam Hardy is about to retire.

Hardy

The 71-year-old messenger has become a familiar figure to thousands who have visited the Capitol because for years he has been the committee doorman.

Hardy began his service with the committee February 9, 1908, and since then has served under 10 chairmen. Only one member, Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), has been in the House longer than Hardy has served the committee.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) found Hardy on the job when he first came to Congress in 1911. Before the House recessed last Friday, Doughton in a floor speech paid tribute to Hardy on behalf of the committee. Hardy was in the gallery.

Doughton said Hardy was an "irreplaceable" public servant—"loyal, efficient and devoted."

Hardy is retiring because of the illness of his wife. They live at 1825 S st. nw.

She was appointed budget officer in 1929.

Women's Chorus From Iowa Sings During State 'Day'

Three hundred members of the Iowa Rural Women's Chorus sang last night in honor of Washington's 150th birthday.

Scheduled originally for the Sesquicentennial Band Shell near the Capitol, the Iowa Day observance was forced by the rain into the Senate caucus room.

Representing Governor William S. Beardsley, Senator Bourke Hickenlooper (R., Ia.) received the Sesquicentennial plaque awarded to each State on its honor day.

After the singing, the 300 women were entertained at a buffet supper and reception in the caucus room by the Iowa State Society of Washington.

Labor Day Brings Rain And Solitude To District

Traffic Slows, But Weather Causes a Few Downtown Jams

Washington was just one yawning, holiday-emptied, weather-bothered town yesterday.

As the clerk at a Connecticut ave. apartment house saw it: "Everybody who could has gone, I guess."

Traffic in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia was slow, evidence of the mass of Washingtonians who Saturday went to the beaches and resorts or motored back home.

Even the pace of accidents dropped off considerably.

Nobody was downtown during the day. It was too warm, too humid.

By 4 p. m., it was 90 degrees. It had never been cooler than 74. It was sunny, but few were out for a tan in Rock Creek Park, or down at the Georgetown Channel to watch the canoe races.

It Rains (Again)

And in the evening it rained (again), and there were a few traffic jams downtown (again).

The downfall, nothing spectacular, canceled the performance of "Faith of Our Fathers" in the Rock Creek Park Amphitheater. The evening was dedicated to American labor, and Undersecretary of Labor Michael J. Galvin delivered a brief speech before the performance was rained out.

For Labor Day, it looked like a repeat on weather. Some cloudiness, high in the middle eighties, chance of scattered afternoon showers.

But at least there would be some activity. A number of appliance stores scheduled short-day sales of the George Washington Birthday-bargain variety. Most stores and offices will be closed, however.

Traffic Activity Due

There would be all too much traffic activity—that was sure.

The 300,000 Washingtonians, estimated by the American Automobile Association as traveling, would return. Beginning in the early afternoon, traffic would jam all the arterials leading to the city.

Officials at Union Station were preparing for a busy night. Rail travel yesterday was down 15 percent compared to a normal Sunday, but the Stationmaster's office wasn't expecting any record.

So, who was left, and what were they doing?

President Truman spent the day at Blair House with the First Family.

There were a lot of tourists and convention-goers, visiting Washington just as Washingtonians—those who don't like beaches—were probably visiting their towns. Sightseeing companies reported their best Sunday-before-holiday business since Memorial Day.

Then there were the standbys. Police, for example.

"Aaah," complained a police communications corporal, "no traffic—sure. But this heat. Lot of cutting, fighting, shooting—heat brings it out."

Heat Brings Violence

Fact confirmed by a busy interne at Gallinger Hospital:

"We've got nothing in particular, but boy!, everything in general. Shootings, stabbings, cuttings, people getting into fights. No heat prostration or sunburn yet," he added.

And let the folks back home mark this, there were some Congressmen at work in the Capitol offices.

What was Representative Thomas H. Werdell (R., Calif.) busy with?

"Correspondence, correspondence, correspondence! Listen," said the Congressman, "you ever tried to dictate 300 letters? Well, I can't touch more than 60 a day. I will be here tomorrow."

Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho)?

"With the long hours we've been having in the Senate, you don't have time to catch up with your correspondence and political campaigns. I can't fly back home every weekend like some of the Senators," he said, "I live 2500 miles from here."

Or Senator Eugene D. Millikin (D., Colo.)?

Correspondence.

As for the folks stuck in Washington, there was the radio, the neighborhood movie and the beneficial electric fan.

There was some to-do in Terry and the Pirates over bagpipes, Little Max in Joe Palooka had his troubles, and Prince Valiant was off on another adventure.

Area TV Sets Total 160,575

Some 160,575 television sets were in operation in the Washington area as of September 1, the Washington Television Circulation Committee estimates.

This figure represents an increase of 10,250 sets over the August 1 total, the committee reported. Estimates are made by the committee on the basis of sales figures.

The committee represents the four operating television stations in Washington, WNBW, WMAL-TV, WTTG, and WTOP-TV.

29th Division Backs UMT and Ober Law

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Twenty-ninth Division Association urged the adoption of universal military training and opposed the seating of a Communist China delegation in the United Nations, in resolutions adopted today.

Charles R. Bryan of Staunton, Va., was a nominating committee's choice for national commander. The slate proposed by the committee was unopposed for election tomorrow.

A resolution approving a proposed 100-million-dollar American loan to Spain was tabled without being brought to a vote. Delegates expressed the opinion the matter should be left to the discretion of Congress.

Another resolution urging approval of Maryland's antisubversive Ober Law also was adopted. The law will be the subject of a referendum in the November election.

Delegates also voted for establishment of a permanent national headquarters to be located in Washington and employment of a permanent administrative clerk there.

Previously, national headquarters was located each year in the home town of the current national commander.

Experiment Margaret

Ounce of Prevention Best Method of Keeping Beautiful Complexion

Cleansing with Cream for that "Ounce of Prevention"

Second day of 17-year-old Margaret's two weeks' beauty program.

By Ann Lawrence

THAT old saw about an "ounce of prevention" was never more true than in the case of complexion care. Naturally, the college-aged miss does not need the elaborate and time-consuming ritual of the woman of 40.

But if she is not to need the "pound of cure" when she is 35 of 40, prevention-ounces are in order.

The very first step in the preventitive program is absolute cleanliness.

Since Margaret's use of cosmetics is limited to powder and lipstick daily, with foundation cream an occasional filip to her evening make-up, she asked, "Isn't soap and water enough?"

Although she has been in the habit of morning and evening face wash, the answer to her question is "no." Two soap and water cleansings each day are not enough, even for her young, normal skin.

Needs Three Cleansings Daily

COSMETICS, dust and dirt should be removed at least three times a day to keep the pores from clogging and to keep the skin healthy and glowing. Because Margaret's skin is normal, she can use her soap and water technique in the morning and at noon time. But to cleanse her skin thoroughly, she needs more than the usual lick-and-a-promise that most young people go through.

Here is her a. m. schedule: Splash the face with cold water, for a quick "eye opener." Now fill the bowl with steaming water and hold your face over it for several seconds to help open the pores. With both hands, work up a good, fluffy lather and spread it all over your face and neck. Next take a complexiou brush (a rubber one is fine for its softer prongs cannot damage the skin as a too-stiff bristle brush may do) and work in upward and outward circular motions, from the base of the neck up to the hairline. Pay particular attention to the areas around your nose and chin, where enlarged pores, black or whiteheads are apt to form.

Be sure to remove every trace of the soap with not one, but at least two rinsings with clear, warm water. The last step is to splash your face with cold water again, to close the pores and give a healthy glow. Be sure you dry your face carefully; it can chap as easily as your hands.

Noontime is again soap and water time. You can skip the initial splash with cold water and the complexion brush treatment. But wash your face well; be sure to rinse it carefully, and dry with equal care.

Cream Treatment at Night

AT NIGHTTIME, even young skins will benefit from a cleansing cream treatment. It's that same "ounce of prevention" against dirty pores, flaky skin and roughness. For Margaret's complexion, a cleansing cream for normal skins was selected. It's light, fluffy and fragrant, spreads easily and is economical for the college girl because a little goes a long way. It dislodges all the surface dirt and seems to penetrate the pores, but leaves no oily residue on the skin.

Two applications, from neck to hairline, followed by a special skin freshener, complete the cleansing routine, as illustrated.

The particular skin freshener selected for Margaret has mild bleaching qualities, which will help to tone down her freckles (and she has plenty of 'em!). At the same time, it helps keep the pores free and healthy. She'll use it after every cream cleansing, sponging it all over her skin with a pad of cotton which has been wrung out in cold water.

Nubian Furniture Finish, So Popular Now, Can Be Applied Easily by Amateur

Black as the night—but shot through with a few beams of moonlight—is the Nubian finish now so popular for furniture. You see lots of it in the stores and some readers, like W. L., would like to achieve it at home.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to get the dark Nubian finish on a table? Can it be done by an amateur?

W. L., Washington.

Though your Nubian finish may not be as fine as that done by experts in a furniture factory, you should be able to get very nice result this way:

Once the old finish is thoroughly removed and the wood sanded smooth, apply a black or very dark stain. When this has completely dried, cover the entire surface with a coat of thinned shellac. This shellac coat is important because it will prevent bleeding of the stain when paint is applied later.

After the shellac is good and dry, apply a white enamel undercoat paint and rub the surface almost immediately with an absorbent, lint-free cloth across the grain. This will leave the white in the pores and remove it from the surface.

When the white paint is thoroughly dry, sand the surface smooth. To finish the process, apply several coats of varnish if you want a high gloss. Let surface dry thoroughly between coats. For a soft-gleam, use dull-finish varnish or rub dried varnish surface with linseed oil, powdered pumice stone, and a piece of burlap.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me if there are any health food stores in Washington and if so, where located?

Mrs. A. L. G., Odenton, Md.

If you have opportunity to consult a Washington telephone directory, you'll find about 15 firms listed under "Food-Health" in the yellow pages. Addresses of two of these stores are: 1226 H st. nw., and 503 12th st. nw.

DEAR ANNE:

Nine years ago, when I came to work for the Government, I received my appointment along with the name of a Government Housing Registry that gave me a list of addresses where rooms were available. I would now like to contact this agency to list an apartment I have available. Could you tell me that name and address of this agency?

M. C., Washington 2, D. C.

Such listings are now kept by Veteran's Housing, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw. This office can be reached through the District of Columbia number, National 6000. Despite its name, its service is not restricted to veterans, being available to anyone moving into Washington.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Early Bird Gets the Muscles, Too

By Ida Jean Kain

LET'S take a holiday from slimming while I tell you about Early Bird . . .

Early Bird is a robin who toppled out of the nest far too soon, at a downy age. When he came periously close to getting in the clutches of the neighbor's cat, Kitty Witty, we took over.

From this experiment I learned what the oft-used phrase "eat like a bird" really means. While it implies a mere nothing, actually it's eating every 30 minutes. I had read somewhere that a very young bird must be fed that often and so he was, on the hour and the half hour. And how our robin grew!

Being a dietitian, I wanted to make sure his nutrition was not neglected in any respect, and called a pet shop to ask their advice on the care and feeding of baby robins. They suggested mashed hard-cooked egg yolk and soft bread crumbs . . . which he got, vitamin-enriched of course. But the piece de resistance was worms. Early Bird soon developed a selective appetite and when we would get a bit lazy and try to shift to the egg and crumbs, skipping the worms (which incidentally are uncommonly hard to come by), our boarder would not open his beak for the second bite . . . no sir, he preferred worms.

On this perfectly balanced diet our young-un developed strength, muscles and weight . . . he got very chesty. And little wonder, for we discovered later the mama bird was feeding him too!

All day long he practiced balancing on the edge of the box and at dusk we put him down in the box where he fell asleep immediately. The mama bird gave constant instructions, and while we may have misinterpreted now and then, we got along. When he first perched jauntily on the edge of the box, chest out, we felt he was ready to fly and put him on the ground and started to take down the box. But he was not ready, he was just big for his age . . . as his mama kept screaming at us. She stopped scolding when we put the box back in the tree and returned Early to his safe perch.

Then came a sudden afternoon storm and our bird had to go down in his box. Thirty minutes later, the storm over, we came to check up, just in time to see Early try his wings and light off into the woods . . . probably at an earlier age than any robin before him.

This story has a double moral: Good nutrition pays . . . and if you want a bird to try his wings, don't make it too easy. If he has to get out of the box on his own, he'll know he can fly.

Fabric-Wise Teenage Fashion

VANITY PATTERN 6109

TOP spot in a well-dressed teenager's wardrobe goes, in these back-to-school days, to her beloved "separates"—the blouse and skirt matched to look like a dress or mixed for contrast and variety. The new fall fabrics, colorful and practical, are perfect for these young fashions.

The big news of year-round cottons is a real boon to girls who cling to cotton blouses throughout the school year. These new cottons, moreover, are wrinkle resistant and have shrinkage control. They include clan plaids in colored woven cotton, printed twills and broadcloth in bright appealing colors. The rayon plaids that have a woolly or worsted look—as shown at the right in the illustration of Variety Pattern 6109 are wonderfully suited for the classroom. Other scholastic stars are the new lightweight and washable woolens, notably jersey. In corduroys, the all-cotton pin-whale in hot orange or in gray is a favorite. In velveteen, it's the gold or black that's most used to trim plaids, or the bright colors for skirts and blouses.

With this selection in mind, any teenager or her mother will enjoy planning to make a skirt and blouse with Vanity Pattern 6109. The bib-front is effective in contrasting fabric. The pockets on the skirt are this season's medium size. In 39-inch fabric—rayon, for instance—Size 12 takes 2⅜ yards for the skirt, 1⅞ yards for the blouse and ½ yard contrasting fabric. Pattern 6109 in teenage sizes, 10, 12, 14 and 16.

KILLS MOTHER—Gary Zielger, 9, of Oregon City, Oreg., posed with his dog, Monna, yesterday, unaware that a pistol bullet he admitted firing had killed his mother. District Attorney Leonard Lindas said the parents were divorced and the mother remarried. Mrs. Mathilde Laier, 28, was at the father's farm home to take the boy and his infant sister to her new home. Lindas quoted the boy as saying, "Sure I shot her ... I didn't want to go"

British Labor Survey Shows Fear of War

LONDON, Sept. 3 (AP).—A deep-seated fear of war and a wide desire for a negotiated end to the East-West deadlock was revealed today among the grassroots segments of Britain's ruling Labor Party.

The disclosure of rank and file feelings came in the publication of 52 tight-packed pages of resolutions and amendments submitted for the party's annual conference next month.

It was clear throughout the 27 resolutions dealing with "foreign policy and war danger" that the rank-and-file attitude was based almost entirely on emotions.

Almost all urged some middle way between the United States and Russia.

The resolutions urged special international conferences for disarmament, banning the atom bomb. Big Five conferences among Britain, the United States, France, Russia and Communist China, and United Nations talks to end the cold war.

The original resolutions were submitted before fighting broke out in Korea. Amendments submitted since agreed that "resolute opposition" must be shown "to all forms of aggression such as the attack upon South Korea."

China Reds Treat U.S. Nationals Like Other Foreigners

HONGKONG, Sept. 3 (AP).—Chinese Communists are turning out huge amounts of anti-American propaganda, but they are treating the 4000 Americans in Red China just like other foreigners.

A reliable informant, well placed in the Yangtze Valley of the China mainland, reported today in a message direct to the Associated Press that he could find no evidence of anti-Americanism among the Chinese public.

"Some 4000 Americans in continental China are faring as well as can be expected," he said.

"There are no more incidents involving American nationals than there were a year ago."

This report said the only restrictions imposed on Americans was on freedom of movement. All non-treaty nationals are under the same regulations.

Church Represents 'False God,' Says Resigning Pastor

HADLEY, Mass., Sept. 3 (AP).—Dr. Paul T. McClurkin, pastor of First Congregational Church for five years, today resigned from the ministry "because the Christian church represents a false God and a false Christ."

He said, "So strong is my conviction that much of the present emphasis of the church is untrue that I feel impelled to submit my resignation from this parish and from the ministry."

Dr. McClurkin, a minister for 17 years, charged that the church "is responsible for many of the gravest errors of our civilization."

Dr. McClurkin said he will become director of the Life Research Foundation in New York. The foundation, he said, will conduct research into "the workings of the mind, the answers to war, insanity and other ills of mankind."

Must Bring in 600,000 Jews, Israel Parley Told

JERUSALEM, Sept. 3 (AP). — Prime Minister David Ben Gurion told an emergency economic conference today 600,000 Jews must be brought to Israel in the next three years from Europe, Asia and Africa at a cost of $1,500,000,000.

The Israeli government submitted to the economic conference attended by 100 experts from Israel, the United States and some other countries a blueprint for Israel's agricultural development under a four-year plan.

Youngsters Need Encouragement

Let Child Set Pace in First Day of School

(This is the second of six articles advising parents of the importance of those "first days"—and years—at scho... Dr. James L. Hymes, jr., is professor of education at George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn., and past president of the National Association of Nursery Education. These articles are selected from THREE TO SIX, just published by Public Affairs Committee, New York.)

By James L. Hymes, Jr.

CHAPTER TWO

Even with the best preparation, children sometimes are upset when they first go to school. Some youngsters cry. Others cling to their mother and act unusually shy. Don't be disturbed if your child does any of these.

He may have given every sign of being ready for school and still act this way. It is not the least bit unusual. Many children do. You expect more of this if your youngster is three, but kindergarten children do it too and even some good normal healthy 6-year-olds. Beginning school IS a big step; many a child needs a boost when he comes to it.

You will help your child if your feeling is right. Know inside yourself that this is normal. It doesn't mean that you have done anything wrong or that your child is a baby. This will keep you from blaming yourself or shaming him.

Some youngsters need just a word of encouragement. A verbal pat gives them enough strength to go ahead. Teasing them or being unsympathetic just adds to their worries.

Stay, If He Needs You

But words aren't enough for all children. Your youngster may want you to stay in the group for a while. He may want to stand by your side. If he does, let him be as close as he feels he has to be.

He may go right out to the other children and play well, so long as you are there. He may be glad to stay the whole morning or the whole day, so long as he can look around and see you if he strikes a low point.

He may make his best start by taking school in small doses. Many youngsters today begin by going to school with their mother, mother stays, and the first days are very short . . . just an hour or two.

Don't be worried about these special arrangements. More and more teachers today are glad to do whatever gives youngsters a happy start. After all, this is a step forward. Yesterday the two of you were at home together.

Today you may still be together but you are in school. There is no need to hurry. Your child will be in school for 16 years or so. You can afford to take the time that a good beginning demands.

Let Child Set Pace

If a youngster feels lonely about staying in school, you want him to express his feelings to you. Loneliness is no good when it's bottled up inside. It is a bitter kind of feeling.

Your best bet is to let your child set the pace. So long as he is in school, the other children and the activities going on are a magnet. Their pull may not be very hard at first but the magnetism is there. It will catch on as time moves along.

Many children even tell you the time in words: "You don't have to stay today" or "You can go now." When your child gives you the word—either spoken or by his behavior—then you can know with confidence that he feels good about being on his own.

Don't scoot away from him before he is ready. This gives him a deserted feeling. It can make him cling to you longer the next time.

Don't go when his back is turned. Don't go when you think he isn't looking. Don't go when someone else is holding him and he can't do anything about your leaving.

One intermediate step is to leave for a short time. Tell him you will be back soon. Walk around the block, do some quick shopping—but come back soon. This builds up confidence.

When you think your youngster is ready to be on his own, tell him you are leaving. If the idea distresses him you want to know it—and then change your plan.

Some children begin with wonderful feelings. At three or four or five or six, they take to school like a duck to water. Everything fascinates them and they feel no pangs at all about leaving home. A week or two later the excitement wears off. Don't be shocked if your youngster cries at the prospects of going to school in the morning.

Occasionally there is a specific cause: a conflict with another child, some activity which your youngster can't abide, a rule that gets him down. This is a good time to talk with the teacher. Often the two of you can iron the rumple out and life goes on smoothly.

A Need For "Babying"

Sometimes this is a sign of illness coming on, but more frequently no one thing is wrong. The child has had enough of school for awhile. He wants to be your "baby" again. This sounds alarming but it really isn't. It happens very often. It doesn't mean that a bad habit of truancy is about to start and you ought to squelch it.

A word of encouragement, patience, and talking things over may help. But it does no harm to let a youngster stay home for a day or so. Not as a punishment: "All right then! You can't go to school but see if you have any fun at home. I dare you." But a recognition that—even like a married couple—it is fun to go back to mother once in awhile.

It is wise, too, to take this as a signal to do more with your child after school and on weekends. He finds school good but the price he pays is seeing less of you. You may have to find some ways to make that price less steep.

Tuesday: Sometimes "starting to school" is harder on parents than on children.

Israel Not Planning Further Devaluation

JERUSALEM, Sept. 3 (AP).—Israel's finance minister, Eliezer Kaplan, declared today the government is not considering further devaluation of the currency to fight this youthful nation's present economic crisis.

Israel changed the official value of her pound from $4.03 to $2.80 on September 18, 1949, at the same time Britain devalued the pound.

Radio Actor Is Found Dead in Automobile

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 3 (AP).—Frank L. Graham, 38, radio actor and announcer who had worked the Ginny Simms, Rudy Vallee and Nelson Eddy programs, was found dead last night in the front seat of his car.

Circumstances indicated he took his life. Police said the engine was running and a vacuum cleaner hose had been run from the exhaust pipe into the car.

That Trick Again

A. Godfrey Is Back, But Then He Isn't

—By C. E. Butterfield—

NEW YORK (AP).—Arthur Godfrey is back on his CBS talent scouts show again; although actually still on a eight-weeks vacation. It's made possible by recordings.

The stunt was tried out for the first time last year, but only on the radio program. This time the simultaneous television version also is being run from film recordings. Both the sound and sight transcriptions were made in July before Godfrey went away.

The recorded shows will continue until September 25, when Godfrey is due in person. His morning series will continue until then in the hands of his "permanent" substitute, Robert Q. Lewis.

In transferring his activities back to CBS, where he started in radio in the early network days, Morton Downey also is to have a television show. Opener has been set for 10 p. m. September 22, to take the form of a song and guest series. The radio programs will be Saturday mornings beginning October 7.

Downey, on NBS last season and before that MBS, had a radio show for one sponsor and an NBC-TV series for another.

ANTICIPATING that more open spaces than usual will have to be filled with sustaining shows when radio's fall season starts, the networks are making plans accordingly.

The reason for this increase in network-built programs is attributed to television through the weaning away, to a certain extent, of both sponsor and audience. While the switchover to TV is not yet on an all-out basis, its effect is being noticed to a growing extent.

To meet its situation, NBC has two projects under way. One is a 90-minute production for Sunday nights patterned somewhat after the Saturday night revue it introduced on television last spring. Another is a series of six dramatic features based on current literature. Rights have been acquired, but details are still being worked out.

The Sunday evening series titled "The Dream Show" would run 6:30 to 8 starting October 15, with the last hour in direct competition to Jack Benny and Amos and Andy of CBS. It would present leading talent and include drama, comedy and music, with a complete cast chance weekly. For the opening it is hoped to have Tallulah Bankhead as MC and Fred Allen and Jimmy Durante, with others.

The Drama features acquired are: "The Egg and I" with Claudette Colbert playing the lead; the detective drama "Mr. Moto"; the humorous "Mr. Botts" stories with Robert Cummings of the movies; another detective yarn, "Ne ro Wolf"; the story of a Shakespearean tragedian playing in radio soap opera roles with Monte Wooley as star under the title of "The Magnificant Montague"; and Cary Grant in a new "Mr. Blandings" story. All the programs will have weekly time allotments with or without sponsors except that the Grant series would not go on unless a sponsor develops.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Gold is on vacation. His column today takes the form of a letter to his managing editor.

Dear Boss:

As soon as we got to Chicago and checked into the Stevens, we scrubbed up and called room service for dinner.

I signed the chit and tipped the waiter, who looked at the coins I had handed him and then strode from the room without a word.

"How much did you give him?" Bernice challenged.

"I gave him a little bit more than 10 percent of the check," I snapped, "and if that isn't enough in Chicago to rate a 'thank you,' I won't give 'em anything hereafter."

I didn't need her look of reproach to tell me that I was being silly. But I was in no mood for impudence after having crossed so many outstretched palms with silver on this trip.

Walter, always the diplomat, changed the subject. "Look," he said, pointing to the Chicago Daily News television listings, "Ernie Simon does a man-on-the-street from in front of the State-Lake Theater at 10 o'clock. Let's watch it."

So we hustled down to the State-Lake, where a crowd was already gathered. In 1944, when The Washington Post first bought WINX and brought me in to run the news department, Ernie Simon was a staff announcer. Wounded in the desert fighting while with Montgomery's Eighth in North Africa, he used to hobble around on one good leg and a cane, and dream of the day he'd get his own show.

Today, he's the hottest thing in radio and TV in Chicago. As we edged up to the fringe of the crowd, we heard a woman in front of us say:

"In the old days, when I came home at night, my father would say 'hello.' Now when I walk in he says: 'Shhh! Simon is on.'"

He's the same old Ernie—no better, no worse. Just a little fatter, and better appreciated by the listeners.

"I certainly spurred television sales when I started my first show," he confided. "It looked like everybody in Chicago wanted to sell his set."

It came as a big surprse to us to learn that a Chicago Fair is in progress on the lake front. The 1933 World Fair had been so well publicized that I couldn't imagine why this one was being kept a secret.

Purely in the line of duty, I went out to investigate. The current Chicago Fair turns out to be a small-scale venture built around the Frontiers of Freedom show, and specifically designed to serve as a tourist attraction.

This Frontiers of Freedom deal is big league stuff, even if the rest of the fair isn't. It's an open-air dramatization of the history of American progress, from colonial times to the present. In an hour of cleverly staged scenes (using scores of horses, cattle, automobiles, reapers, binders, airplanes and even locomotives of all sizes) you get a big 60 cents worth. Indians attack the settlers, only to be driven off by a troop of United States Cavalry riding onto the stage at full tilt; prospectors bring in an oil well; George Washington takes the oath of office; and J. P. Morgan and Andrew Carnegie meet to lay plans for an industrial empire.

It's wonderful stuff, and I can't help but wonder why some wide-awake Hollywood outfit doesn't swipe the idea for a movie that could easily become an American classic.

The Fair includes nine model homes (two bits for a tour of all nine) which are supposed to be daring and novel, but which offer few features you can't see advertised any Sunday in our own real estate section.

All the model homes are ramblers. Many keep construction costs low by using little brick, and substituting fixed partitions (a foot of opening, top and bottom) in place of walls. Some of the houses use a new type plastic folding partition between living quarters and hallways leading to bedrooms, kitchen or bath—thereby overcoming one standard objection to ramblers: "You can see the whole house from the living room."

Incidentally, the latest in bathrom sinks is a huge expanse of flat porcelain with a modest depression in the center to hold the water. The idea is to give the householder plenty of "parking space" around the sink's perimeter, for cosmetics, shaving gear, etc.

One house borrowed a gimmick from the auto manufacturers. Many of the new picture windows look pretty, but don't open to admit air. This one drops down at the push of an electric button, and as it disappears, an attached screen is pulled into place. The screen appears to have been curved up into the ceiling when not in use; the window apparently goes straight down into the basement, or into a specially built well if there's no basement.

The most expensive of the brick ramblers featured a design which may well prove highly popular in such urban centers as Washington.

Outside the living room there's a large trellis-covered patio. Its vines are dense enough to shield the patio from the elements, yet the area is out of doors, and exposed to whatever summer breezes are available.

A long brick wall hides the front of the rambler from the street, and between the wall and the house there's a play area for the children. The wall is low and covered with vines, and not nearly as unattractive as it might appear to be from this description.

Prices seem to be considerably higher than for similar facilities in Washington, and anybody who is thinking of coming to Chicago to buy his furniture would be well advised to stay home. The price tags on the furnishings made me appreciate our Washington stores as never before.

Bill.

P. S. The fair features a mile-long "railroad" called the Deadwood Central. As we got aboard, the "conductor" who greeted us turned out to be Capt. Billy Bryant, whose showboat "The Goldenrod" played the Ohio and Mississippi for many, many years. "I'm the official greeter," Billy explained. "Yesterday I greeted Betty Grable; today it's you. That's life, I guess."

American University Park

. . . Section of Washington bounded by Western Avenue, River Road, 43rd Street, Nebraska Aveune and Loughborough Road to Dalecarlia Reservoir.

In 1890 Bishop John Hurst and T. W. Talmadge cantered by carriage along Loughborough Road, looking for a site for the American University. On a spot overlooking the rolling hills, the Bishop said, "Here shall be erected a great university dedicated to the love of peace and human understanding."

Perhaps his dream communicated itself to the surroundings as well as to the University, for neighborliness is a University Park tradition.

President Likes Pay As You Go

By Drew Pearson

Harry Truman's experience of going broke as a haberdasher and paying off his debts for 20 years now influences his decisions as President of the United States. This was revealed at a White House conference called to discuss the defense of Alaska — the place which any Russian invasion might hit first.

Pearson

Military advisers were trying to get the President to O. K. a plan for public housing and utilities in Alaska to be paid for over a 35-year period. Housing for troops in the bitter cold winters happens to be what Alaska needs most.

Mr. Truman listened carefully and then said: "No, I'm not going to approve that. I spent 20 years of my life with a heavy debt hanging over my head, and I'm not going to burden the people of Alaska with that kind of worry. Every year I paid $1000 on the debt when my clothing store went under. It wasn't all paid until the year I was nominated for vice president.

Philosophically, Mr. Truman continued: "I don't want my children or children's children paying off the debts for mistakes I could make in the White House. That's why I don't want to commit our Armed Forces or resources to any such long-range plans as the Russians seem up to."

Cabinet Feud Hotter

One of President Truman's most intimate associates was walking out of the White House grounds when a black limousine stopped and a voice said: "Want a lift."

It was the likeable, controversial Secretary of Defense, Louey Johnson. Truman's friend got in the car, and after some conversation, Louey put his hand on the friend's knee and said:

"We've got to get Acheson out of the cabinet. You can help me. You can talk to the President about it whereas I can't. Let's pitch in and put this across."

Truman's close friend was noncommittal. He made no promises. But the incident illustrates the white heat which the Acheson-Johnson feud has reached. There have been cabinet feuds in many previous administrations such as that between Jesse Jones and Vice President Wallace in Roosevelt's day. But seldom has there been such open sniping at a fellow cabinet member as the current attack of Louey Johnson against Dean Acheson.

Senators who sat in the closed-door session of the appropriations committee listening to the testimony of Secretaries Acheson and Johnson last week never would have dreamed there was any animosity between them. Their words almost dripped soothing syrup. On the other hand, several Senators got into a row with the two cabinet members and also between themselves.

Everyone present was sworn to secrecy; but here is what happened:

Senator Homer Ferguson, fiery, white-maned Michigan Republican did most of the sniping at Acheson and Johnson, asking needle-pointed questions in an attempt to rouse them against each other. After failing to provoke the two cabinet officers into an open quarrel, Ferguson demanded bluntly whether Johnson "had always agreed" with Acheson's policies.

"It isn't a question of agreeing," replied the Secretary of Defense. He explained that both are members of the National Security Council, which thrashes out security problems. All members express their opinions freely, then the President makes the final decision.

"Since I have been on the job, I have followed straight through the policies of the Commander in Chief," added Johnson.

Under Ferguson's persistent heckling, however, Johnson offered to outline his disagreements with Acheson over Formosa if it could be kept out of the official record. But this was turned down by the Senators.

However, Senator Ken Wherry of Nebraska, sometimes called "The Merry Mortician," dropped all his merriment when Acheson accused him of "loose talk" on the subject of rearming Germany."

The Nebraskan leaped from his chair, his face red with rage.

"You can't accuse me of loose talking!" he thundered.

This provoked a series of sharp questions from Knowland, until Tennessee's Chairman McKellar interrupted with a snort: "I don't like these political questions."

"I resent the statement of the chairman that politics is involved," bristled the Senator from California. "The questions I was asking are important to the defense of the Nation. I am only interested in getting the facts."

Then he proceeded to enumerate the various times he had cooperated with the bipartisan foreign policy.

McKellar retorted that the committee's work had been delayed by repetitious questioning, and cited the second appearance of Central Intelligence Chief Admiral Hillenkoetter, who the aged McKellar insisted on calling "Admiral Hellicopter."

"We had Admiral Hellicopter up here," fussed McKellar, "and asked him question after question. Then we brought him back, and went over the same questions, same answers."

The Republican Senators, however, came back with still more questioning of Johnson and Acheson and the session dragged on for three hours. By adjournment time, Defense Secretary Johnson still hadn't read his prepared statement and ECA Boss Paul Hoffman was still waiting to testify. Their statements were incorporated into the official record without reading, so the Senators could go home.

MEET OUR HONORARY SILVER SPRING BOARD OF DIRECTORS

MEET the "power behind the throne!" Meet the ladies who guide Top Management at The New Hecht Co. Silver Spring Store. They're our Honorary Board of Directors . . . fifteen keen, civic-minded women of Montgomery County whose opinions and advice have helped make our great suburban department store one of the most outstanding in America. Regularly, this panel of experts meets with our executives at Silver Spring. They review our plans, inspect merchandise, give us new slants on how to make it a better store . . . to serve you better than ever. They represent you—our customers. They interpret your demands to us . . . tell us the kind of goods you want. Their knowledge of your shopping habits and needs has proven invaluable to us. For their fresh ideas and sound counsel, we are deeply appreciative. It is a pleasure to present to you . . . and to salute . . . our Honorary Silver Spring Board of Directors.
